Arctic - Current Petition circulating:

http://www.theanimalrescuesite.com/clickToGive/campaign.faces?siteId=3&campaign=EarthJustice-ArcticDrilling&ThirdPartyClicks=ERA_102812_EarthJustice-ArcticDrilling_p

Dear Sec. Salazar:

Allowing oil drilling and development in the pristine and remote waters of America's Arctic Ocean is a risky and unnecessary venture. Government scientists agree that more data is needed to fully understand the impacts of an oil spill in this sensitive region. Given this, I urge you to rescind the Chukchi Sea lease Sale 193 leases and gather vital missing baseline data and oil spill response information before moving forward with leasing and drilling in the Arctic Ocean.

The rush to allow oil drilling in the Arctic Ocean puts a sensitive ecosystem at unnecessary risk. It threatens endangered and threatened species, as well as Native communities.

Please consider the impacts of your decision to open the Arctic Ocean to oil drilling. Just over a year ago, a massive oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico devastated that region. Don't make the same mistake twice by opening the Arctic Ocean to unsafe oil drilling.

Wall Street Journal alfalfa op-ed stirs CAFA response Aaron Kiess, Western Farm Press

I'm sure it's not surprising to hear that the attack on alfalfa's water usage is gaining momentum once again. It's something to be expected whenever rain and snowfall aren't up to par. What's surprising about an October op-ed piece about alfalfa, however is the publication, the Wall Street Journal, and two authors from Arizona — Robert Glennon, a University professor of law and public policy, and Peter Culp, an environmental attorney in Arizona. Their beef is that when shipments are made to China, large amounts of water "will leave the country embedded in alfalfa — most of it grown in California."

FAR*Immersion Training™

Hands-on, Action Focused, Targeted to your needs, Active Learning Environment

Includes a special section on Recent Changes to the FAR
(5 Day Course - 40 CLPs)

ATTN: Government Contractors - This course is perfect for your PMs, COs and key staff -
Learn the rules and culture of federal contracting

The FAR. Federal Acquisition Regulation. 32 thousand pages including all supplements and related regs. 53 parts. Over 90% of the clauses in government contracts are prescribed by regulation. Several agencies have their own versions such as NASA, DoD and others. The FAR is ponderous. Detailed.

Now. Imagine five exciting ?? days during which you will be "trained" on the FAR. Not really exciting is it?

This is why we have developed FAR*Immersion Training (R). Designed to provide unparalleled training in an action - challenging environment where the students are given a solid foundation in the FAR and then focus on that portion of the FAR most important to their agency mission. Does your agency get involved with large, complex R&D programs. The course will allow your staff to specialize in this sector. How about small purchase. Same. How about fixed price? Same. Set-asides? Same.

We use classroom training supported by lively instruction and workbook text (so the students will have a working reference upon return to normal assignment). This becomes an important, valuable desk reference. This is supplemented by break-out sessions, group assignments and findings presentations, targeted problem solving drawing on real world examples.

This is why we call it "Immersion".

This workshop is recommended for 40 Continuous Learning Points (CLPs) toward DAWIA, FAC-C and FAC-COTR requirements. A Government Training Inc Certificate of Successful Completion will be provided to all attendees upon conclusion of the workshop.

The course is taught by knowledgeable, highly skilled instructors who have a wealth of practical experience and know how-to present complex material in an easily understandable manner. The key points in the class will be emphasized with practical exercises to reinforce the lessons learned and to provide the students with opportunities to apply the FAR to realistic scenarios. This approach ensures that every student will return to work with improved skills and the confidence to apply them to virtually any acquisition situation.

Hatching a Plan for Northwest Salmon: Conference Highlights Fish Stock Restoration

Jackleen de La Harpe, Indian Country Today

Fish hatcheries built below the dams in the Pacific Northwest have replenished salmon stocks for downstream and ocean fishermen for decades, while upstream, wild runs where treaty tribes fish have dwindled. Now tribes report that hatcheries can serve another purpose—to restore and strengthen wild stocks by allowing them to breed with hatchery fish, a controversial practice that seems to be refuting experts' fears that the wild fish stocks would be weakened.
