Idle No More at MLK March

Length: 1:22

Press Release, January 14, 2013

From: INM founders, organizers and Elder advisors

Idle No More has a responsibility to resist current government policies in a Peaceful and Respectful way. It can be done. It can be done without aggression or violence. This is an energetic, exciting and transformative time.

This movement has been guided by Spiritual Elders, dreams, visions, and from peoples' core values. We are here to ensure the land, the waters, the air, and the creatures and indeed each of us, return to balance and discontinue harming each other and the earth.

To keep us on this good path, we ask that you, as organizers create space for Elders or Knowledge/Ceremonial Keepers to assist in guiding decisions as we move forward. It is up to each of us to see that this movement respects all people, the environment, and our communities and neighbours.

In peace and solidarity.

Idle No More Rally, the Willow Brook Mall, Langley, BC, January 19, 2013

“My heartfelt thanksgiving to Prime Minister Stephen Harper and his Conservative Government for their on-going and deeping injustices to our Aboriginal Peoples, all our Canadian relatives and Mother Earth! These in just and disrespectful actions of Prime Minister Harper and before him his Liberal Predecessors, have ignited and fully awakened a long awaited cultural and spiritual movement of Indigenous Peoples and their Allies. This cultural and spiritual Movement is growing stronger with every passing day and is and will have long wide-ranging global impacts!

As long prophesied by our Wise Elders and Visionaries, this rapidly emerging Spiritual and Cultural Movement for Protecting our Mother Earth, for uplifting of Social Justice and for Honoring our Treaties has long been gathering strength, commitment and courage in the hearts and minds of our Indigenous Peoples and other Members of the Human Family for many years! It is spiritually and culturally grounded and will not be quieted or defeated!

May we never forget, no matter how great the challenges may be before us, there is no Power on Earth or Heaven that can stop the ultimate victory by our Indigenous Peoples and our Allies in fulfilling our long-held Prophecies! We will be tested, but we will not be defeated!

As long as we continue to Walk the Red Road with our prayers, songs and ceremonies, there is no forces, of any kind, except our own disunity, that will prevent us from achieving complete victory over the greedy, International Corporate Forces leagued against us!

We are the prayers, the songs and ceremonies of those who are walking the Red Road before us! We are their spiritual representatives on Mother Earth! We have never surrendered and we will never surrender our love for our Creator, the welfare of our Indigenous Peoples and Human Family and our Sacred Covenant with our Beloved Creator that we would protect our Mother Earth and our future generations, without hesitation and with whatever sacrifice that is required!

This includes the future of all the children of Mother Earth, including the future generations of those parents and grandparents that are currently lost in the illusion of Material Wealth and Power! In their spiritual blindness that are choosing to fight a losing, but devastating battle with the natural laws of the Creator, that in the end, if successful will destroy their own children and future generations!" We will not allow this to happen to any and all our future generations of the Human Family!!

INFORMATION:

For 30 years Chief Raoni of The Kayapo People, has dedicated his life to trying to stop the Belo Monte Dam from being built in his beloved Amazon Rainforest. Helped by the singer, Sting, and many other celebrities along the way, he has met many World Leaders, travelling extensively in his efforts to get the World to Awaken to the Catastrophic Climate Nightmare awaiting the World, if Brazil's President, Dilma Rousseff, continues ahead with building Belo Monte, third largest and most inefficient dam in the world, in the Rainforest, along with a further 59 Rainforest dams, and over 400 in Brazil by 2030. If Belo Monte continues to be built it will bring Genocide to Chief Raoni's People, to Shayla Juruna's, and ALL those dependant on the mighty River Xingu for their very *EXISTENCE* They have tried everything they can think of to stop this dam, but Dilma Rousseff refuses to listen to them, to people around the world, to experts, to the voices behind the MILLIONS of signatures collected against this outrage..

Chief Raoni, now in his 80s, has vowed to fight to the death with his Warriors rather than let Belo Monte be built.

On the 15th June, 2012, on the eve of Rio's Earth Summit, some of the Warriors, helped by friends, broke through the start of this dam, using shovels, pick-axes and their bare hands! A joyous message was sent out around the world and now thousands are starting to learn about Belo Monte. 11 of those who helped to break the dam, freeing the Xingu River again, are now possibly facing legal charges...As I write this, Warriors of the Xikrin Tribe, (related to The Kayapo) are now in their 17th Day of Protest at the construction site of Belo Monte, having stopped work on the dam by taking keys to the lorries and earth diggers.

This dam is being built illegally, whilst law suits against it are still going on. Judges who ruled against Belo Monte have been removed, then replaced with judges who ruled in favour of it. Corporations who backed Dilma Rousseff's presidential election have since been awarded massive contracts for Belo Monte. She has refused to listen to the deep concern of the United Nations and Amnesty International about the callous way she has treated the Indigenous People. She refuses to listen to *anyone* it seems, and has turned from a woman who once upon a time, was a guerilla fighter against Brazil's Military Regime, into EXACTLY the kind of Arrogant, Uncaring, Unfeeling Politician she once despised....

Available Scholarships for Teachers

Grants, loans and especially scholarships are administered based on a wide range of variables. Qualifications attached to financial aid are sometimes broad, but can also be very specific. For example, general need-based aid requires only that an applicant exhibit financial need during college, which opens eligibility to almost everyone with a tuition bill.

On the other hand, some financial aid funds are reserved for specific functions, like helping certain groups succeed, or encouraging academic excellence in specific areas. Minority scholarships and grants, for instance, target select groups to receive tuition assistance for college.

When the supply of well-trained professionals isn't meeting the demand, financial aid is used to encourage students to go into certain fields. Targeted aid of this type is attractive to students who have not chosen a major, and to those who are already working toward degrees in high-demand fields.

Currently, college students pursuing teaching degrees are rewarded with privileged access to unique financial aid opportunities.

Elementary and secondary schools that enroll primarily low income children are suffering from shortages of competent teachers. As a result, pro-education efforts – including college tuition assistance - are originated at federal, state and local levels. Now, more than ever, undergraduates and graduate students are awarded career-specific college financial aid to pursue teaching credentials.

As an aspiring teacher, you are eligible for general financial aid too, but your pool of resources is instantly deepened by concerted efforts to bring qualified graduates to the profession. Government sources, professional associations and other private entities provide funding for grants and scholarships that serve education majors.

Teacher aid varies from performance based scholarships, to tuition-for-service agreements that require teaching commitments following graduation. Generally, grants are need-based and free of performance indicators. Scholarships, on the other hand, are often attached to eligibility standards like GPA. Both are free-money aid that doesn't get paid back, so your bottom-line impact is the same.

State and Local Teaching Scholarships

Consult with your school's financial aid office for up to date information about specific teaching scholarships in your area. If you're just getting started in college, don't overlook aid offered by your school or state. And if you're nearing graduation, ask about scholarships that can be used to pay living expenses during your student teaching assignments.

While local teaching scholarships are often less rich than national awards, smaller applicant pools make them less competitive. Combine these smaller awards with larger scholarships to piece together your financial aid package.

- Milwaukee Area Teachers Scholarship - Marquette university supports working teachers with this tuition credit. If you are employed as a Wisconsin teacher, Marquette pays for half of a college class you take each semester. The flexible award does not require degree candidacy or other enrollment requirements, and is an example of one type of continuing education incentive available to teachers.
- West Virginia college students are eligible for Underwood-Smith Teacher Scholarships, which can amount to $5000 annually. This example of tuition-for-service financial aid requires each recipient to work within the West Virginia school system for a period of two years for each year the scholarship is received. The teaching commitment is reduced to one-year, provided the teacher is employed at a high-need shortage-area school.
- Wisconsin Early Childhood Association, through its T.E.A.C.H. Early Childhood Wisconsin, is in the business of granting tailor-made tuition solutions to deserving, committed Wisconsin education professionals. The association has doled-out over 7000 scholarships since 1999, to aid professional development in early childhood education.
- Teachers of Tomorrow is a New York City Department of Education program devoted to recruiting qualified staffers to teach in the city's most challenging schools. Tuition reimbursement and other incentives are used to bring qualified professionals to faculty positions at New York's highest-need schools.
- Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority offers college aid to full-time, resident students pursuing teaching credentials within the state. Students who are juniors and beyond are eligible for up to $2500 each semester, under this program. When funding permits, freshmen and sophomores also qualify for scholarships.
- Corporate sponsors generously fund college scholarships for students studying primary and secondary education. The Coca-Cola Foundation supports education at international universities through its Coca-Cola Scholars initiative. Schools like Emory University use Coke dollars to fund scholarship programs for would-be teachers.

National Teaching Scholarships

National scholarships for education majors target future teachers, sometimes showing preference toward candidates studying in specific subject areas. These scholarships include:

- The Federal Government is the largest source of general financial aid, but Uncle Sam also runs programs targeting specific vocational pursuits. The Teacher Education Assistance for College and Higher Education Grant (TEACH) is a government initiative aimed at recruiting college graduates to teach in under-served areas.. Individual states run similar tuition-for-service programs that require students who receive assistance to work in specific jobs following graduation. TEACH recipients are each eligible for up to $4000 annually, in exchange for a four-year teaching commitment at a school that serves low-income students.

- AFCEA is an international organization dedicated to the ethical exchange of information. This IT and communications association provides scholarships annually, to students earning an education in the field of teaching. Each year, 50 students who pursue STEM-related teaching degrees are awarded scholarships valued at $5000 each. Graduate and undergraduates are considered for the scholarships, which require a 3.0 GPA.
- Robert Noyce Teacher Scholarship is administered as an institutional program that provides funding to colleges, which they in turn distribute to worthy candidates pursuing education degrees. The awards specifically target K-12 educators teaching in math and science disciplines.
- Alpha Kappa Alpha's Education Advancement Foundation furthers the sorority's mission to promote educational excellence through several scholarship programs for member-students. The foundation devotes a certain portion of its scholarship funding to students who are education majors.
- The Phi Delta Kappa International Education Foundation awards scholarships of up to $1,000 annually, to high school seniors and current undergraduates pursuing careers in elementary or secondary education. PDK sponsors the Future Educators Association, administering more than 30 scholarships each year – exclusively for future teachers.
- National Board for Professional Teaching Standards offers its own scholarships for teachers. In many cases, awards are funded by private enterprise, including Liberty Mutual insurance, Boeing and Chase.
- Montessori is a teaching philosophy and educational movement dedicated to a core set of teaching principles. Students who wish to become Montessori teachers are encouraged by the American Montessori Society, through a series of education scholarships for attending AMS schools. Awards vary, but the society's Zell Scholarship is worth $1000 annually.
- Bright Horizons Family Solutions, the world's leading provider of employer-sponsored early care, offers four Bright Futures Scholarships worth $2,500 each, for full-time students currently pursuing degrees in early childhood education. Applicants must each submit an essay, resume, transcript, and letters of recommendation.

Diversity Scholarships

Teachers act as role models for a diverse student body, so qualified educators must be drawn from a wide cross-section of cultures and social groups. Some teaching scholarships specifically promote diversity by offering incentives to minorities and other groups that are under-represented in the field of education.

- The Hispanic Scholarship Fund partners with corporations and other donors to break down educational barriers for Latino students. Wells-Fargo and other big-name benefactors work with HSF to promote Hispanic education through scholarships and other initiatives that support education. HSF scholarship applications are submitted online.

- NAACP issues education scholarships to teaching students. Awards change periodically, but the organization recently awarded Sutton Education Scholarships worth $1000 to undergraduates, and $2000 to master's degree candidates.
- The Siemens Foundation has partnered with the Thurgood Marshall Scholarship Fund and the United Negro College Fund to award scholarships to undergraduate and graduate education students attending historically black colleges and universities. Preference is given to applicants pursuing math and science teaching credentials.
- The National Federation of the Blind Educator of Tomorrow Scholarship is worth $3,000 to a blind recipient planning a career in elementary, secondary, or post-secondary teaching. The scholarship is awarded based on the applicant's record of scholastic excellence, financial need and community involvement.

Scholarships are bundled with other financial aid, including grants for teachers and student loans. And if you are a would-be teacher, who is also female, you might be eligible for women's scholarships and grants.

This is an update on an earlier message you may have received on the Shasta Modeling Workshop. Due to scheduling conflicts we have moved the workshop from the initial date of Jan. 22nd/23rd to the final date of February 27th. The workshop is associated with the project "Forecasting reservoir operations to mitigate climate impacts on fish sustainability below Shasta Lake" funded by the NOAA Sector Application Research Program (SARP). The project team includes Principal Investigator (PI) Laurel Saito from the University of Nevada Reno (UNR), Co-PI Derek Kauneckis from UNR, and Co-PI Balaji Rajagopalan from the University of Colorado. As part of the project, we are applying a calibrated reservoir operations model of Shasta Lake with stochastically generated weather and inflow scenarios to examine the ability to use reservoir operations to meet temperature targets downstream of the dam under current and future climate conditions.

We are inviting you and your staff to a workshop for water managers and stakeholders interested in reservoir operations at Shasta Lake. The workshop is designed to provide a two-way flow of information about the research with managers and stakeholders, and importantly, how water managers view the information produced by this project for their operations and how the modeling should be approached to provide greater utility. Participants have been invited from the Bureau of Reclamation, US Department of Interior, The Nature Conservancy, Delta Stewardship Council, and we welcome your suggestions for other potential invitees. Please feel free to forward this message to other interested stakeholders.

The workshop will take place at Redding, California and will be organized and hosted by our research team. Travel is available for those coming from outside the immediate area. Please send a quick confirmation of your intent to participate, how many people from your organization will be attending, and whether travel support is required. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact Dr. Kauneckis at 775-313-1416 or kauneck@unr.edu<mailto:kauneck@unr.edu>, or Dr. Saito at 775-784-1921 or lsaito@cabnr.unr.edu<mailto:lsaito@cabnr.unr.edu> anytime.
