Government Contracting Classroom from SBA

Did you know the federal government buys nearly $100 billion worth of goods and services from small businesses each year?

Government contracts can offer significant opportunities for small businesses, but selling to the government requires a very different approach than selling to the commercial sector.

SBA has created a series of free online contracting courses designed to help prospective and existing small businesses understand the basics about contracting with government agencies. Whether you are just getting started or looking for ways to compete in the government contracting marketplace, the courses below are for you.

About the Courses

These self-paced courses include audio and take about 30 minutes to complete. You can exit a course at any time. Before entering a course, you may be prompted to complete a registration form, which includes a few short questions and takes less than a minute.

Amy Mall, News Report: Scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) and U.S.
Fish and Wildlife Service recently published a peer-reviewed journal article that discusses the results of the investigation into a fracking wastewater spill in Kentucky.

Fracking wastewater that was being stored in open air pits (a practice that can lead to toxic spills) overflowed into Kentucky's Acorn Fork Creek and left an orange-red substance, contaminating the creek with hydrochloric acid, dissolved minerals and metals, and other contaminants. There are two types of chiefs.

A cheif who is a leader of his people and would sacrifice his life for the survival of his people, one that is selfless and humble

A chief who doesn't lead his people, eats before the women and children, wears his war-bonnet not out of pride in being a fearless leader but for recognition and fame.

There are no more chiefs today. There are men who play a roll, men who rather lie to his people to better his image.

Subject: [RenoFreecycle] File - Freecycle Members - Welcome! Please Read before posting

Date: Sep 1, 2013 3:52 PM

Please Read before posting

Dear Freecycle(TM) Member,

Thanks for being a part of The (ever-expanding) Freecycle Network. We're changing the world one gift at a time! This message is sent to all subscribers upon joining.

If you're new to the group or want a quick refresher on making the most of our Freecycle group, please read on! This message contains essential knowledge for all Freecycle members and will answer MANY common new-user questions, so please take the time to read it through.

This Freecycle group matches people who have things they need to get rid of with people who can use them. Our goal is to keep usable items out of the landfill.

By using what we already have on this earth, we reduce consumerism, manufacture fewer goods, and lessen the impact on the earth. Another benefit of using Freecycle is that it encourages us to get rid of junk that we no longer need and promote community involvement in the process. Free your inner pack rat!

The Reno Freecycle group is a branch of an incredibly fast-growing International Freecycle movement, which began in Tucson, AZ on May 1st, 2003 and now boasts thousands of groups all over the world. Please help this group grow by spreading the word! We all personally know lots of great people in our community who would love this idea. So, why not "pay it forward" and tell 3 (or more) people how wonderful Freecycle is! You tell your friends, you family, your neighbors, your co-workers...and they tell theirs, and so on, and so on...well, you get the idea!

With old growth forests, come a number of archaeological sites that have not been touched by roads and other construction activities. It is the foresters who are allowed to "identify" these sites, and that means that a smaller number will be documented and protected.

Help Yellowstone Bison Roam Free

Most of Yellowstone National Park is over 6,000 feet in elevation. As a result, deep snows during harsh winters force Yellowstone's bison to lower elevations outside the boundaries of the park in search of food and shelter.

The bison remain at the lower elevations outside the park's boundaries into the spring when they give birth to their calves.

And it is in spring when workers from Montana's Department of Livestock start hazing bison back into the boundaries of Yellowstone with helicopters, four-wheelers and horses. This practice to try and prevent the bison from coming into contact with local livestock has been going on for more than a decade.

The hazing can be a real horror show—bison calves bawling as they search for their mothers; and even worse, calves suffering broken legs or other potentially fatal injuries in the mayhem.

Since 2002, National Wildlife Federation's Adopt-a-Wildlife-Acre program has been inviting local ranchers to receive compensation in exchange for retiring livestock grazing allotments. Moving cattle off National Forest lands around Yellowstone helps minimize contacts between wildlife and livestock.

So now all that is needed to provide Yellowstone bison with a secure wintering area and to protect them from the spring hazing is for Montana state agencies to approve a proposal to allow bison to roam freely all year round on key habitats west and north of the park. They are asking for public input on their positive plan to let bison live outside of Yellowstone lands before making their final decision.

Tell Montana's Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks you support year-round bison occupancy of public lands both west and north of Yellowstone Park.

In the coldest months of winter, sometimes thousands of bison migrate out of Yellowstone—largely to National Forest lands immediately outside of the park. Then in the spring bison are hazed back into Yellowstone to address ranchers' fears that the bison could transmit disease to domestic livestock. This hazing still occurs even though, most of the National Forest lands no longer have domestic cattle on them, and thus there is no risk of disease transmission

It's time to eliminate these out-of-date policies that compel agencies to haze bison back into Yellowstone Park every spring.

We have until September 13 to submit comments on behalf of bison to Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks. Your voice is extremely important in this effort, as local livestock interests are strongly resisting any change in the status quo.

Please stand up for bison by advocating for places where they can roam without harassment.

Thanks for all you do to protect wildlife.
