

Journal #2978 from sdc 11.7.13

Deebege Newe funded to conduct a Native American Awareness Project

Behind Mt. Rushmore

Oglala Lakota (Part 7)

RTC Transit Connections 2013: The Value of Transit

The girl who silenced the world for 5 minutes

Hail to the Red Clouds

Could Sparkling Glow-in-the-Dark Pavement Replace Street Lights?

About the underground atomic bomb tests near Fallon

Presenting the spiritual/environmental message of the Elders (the Mamos)

Jalisa Ross, Miss Oklahoma City University

AIM-WEST Calendar for November

German intelligence files on ex-Nazis shredded

AASLH Session Proposals Due November 15, 2013

HUD Announcements

UK Queen in depleted uranium trade

Free Forum: Global Warming - Adapting in the Sierra Nevada and Great Basin

PRESS RELEASE

Contact: Joe Kennedy, President

Telephone: (775) 764-7505

D B G Newe

P.O. Box 134

Moapa, NV 89025

Deebege Newe, a Nevada non-profit, has received a grant from the New Mexico Community Foundation to conduct a Native American Awareness Project. The grant purpose, the Native American Awareness Project, is to bring Native American youth (16-30 years of age) together with older activists and elders to communicate the history and values of tribal involvement around the Nevada National Security Site by the use of written materials, translated in part into the Shoshone language that will be used as a learning aid to be distributed at workshops in tribal communities and at special events at higher learning institutions.

Joe Kennedy, President of Deebege Newe stated, "The Western Shoshone people have need of passing down to the next generation the knowledge of our experience from the testing of nuclear weapons at the Nevada National Security Site.” Mr. Kennedy added, “The initial impacts that have resulted in adverse health consequences to our people are long lived. We have learned that by being aware and changing our behavior in the event of a potential exposure to radiation, we can protect our people.”

The grant is the second from the New Mexica Community Foundation Community Involvement Fund. Past funding has been used to conduct outreach and education to Native American tribal communities within the influence of the Nevada National Security Site.

Lewis and Clark? Red Cloud? Buffalo Bill Cody? If South Dakota historian Doane Robinson had his way a century ago, those are the four faces that would be staring majestically into the horizon from the mountain in the Black Hills region of the state. Instead, the faces of four presidents—George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt and Abraham Lincoln—comprise what remains one of the most breathtaking monuments in our nation, Mount Rushmore.

The monument of 60-foot faces, which covers nearly 1,300 acres of rock, was opened on this day in 1941, more than 14 years after construction began. The project was conceived as a way to attract tourism to the area, and the four men originally proposed for the monument played significant roles in building the West. But Danish-American sculptor Gutzon Borglum believed the attraction should be more national in scope, and thus—after President Calvin Coolidge stated that, in addition to Washington, the monument should feature two Republicans and a Democrat—the four presidents were chosen.

It was not built without controversy. The Treaty of Fort Laramie of 1868 had granted the Black Hills to the Lakota tribe in perpetuity. But after the Great Sioux War of 1876, the U.S. seized the land upon the discovery of gold.

Borglum died of an embolism in March 1941, but his project was completed by his son Lincoln. The monument is said to have cost $989,992.32 to build, and remarkably none of the 400 workers who carved it died during construction. Today, more than 3 million tourists visit the site annually.

Oops Jefferson originally was slated to be on the right side of Washington, but when the rock proved to be too soft the image was dynamited.

<http://www.bing.com/videos/search?q=building+mount+rushmore&go=&qs=n&form=QBVR&pq=building+mount+rushmore&sc=3-23&sp=-1&sk=#view=detail&mid=BF7D478A68241D487164BF7D478A68241D487164>

<http://www.pbs.org/wgbh/americanexperience/features/timeline/rushmore/>

Watch President Calvin Coolidge travel to the Black Hills on horseback to see the start of Mount Rushmore's construction.

http://www.bing.com/videos/search?q=building+mount+rushmore&go=&qs=n&form=QBVR&pq=building+mount+rushmore

+rushmore&sc=3-23&sp=-1&sk=#view=detail&mid=182FD7AE695495DE5522182FD7AE695495DE5522

http://www.calaverasenterprise.com/special/sierra_lodestar/page_d4251422-c72c-516b-9bd6-ce27b4bbcf00.html#page_l03

Oglala Lakota (Part 7)

Old photos of Oglala Lakota folks taken between 1868 and 1947. {Homeland is primarily in South Dakota and Nebraska.} The Teton Lakota Nation includes the following Tribes: 1. Oglala 2. Sicangu 3. Hunkpapa 4. Mniconjou 5. Itazipcola 6. Sihasapa 7. Owohenunpa

By: Native American Indian - Old Photos Photos: 91

FREE registration is now open to attend RTC Transit Connections 2013: The Value of Transit on December 6th at Reno-Sparks Convention Center. Visit www.rtcwashoe.com and look further. RTC - The Value of Transit www.youtube.com

Kim Townsend Options for this story

I would like to share this with you young people, those who think they know soooo much hear these words from your peer and remember our people before us, times are changing faster than you can imagine - keep the integrity and dignity of the natural laws.. you will be replacing us in time... love and peace out..

The girl who silenced the world for 5 minutes

She addressed a UN Meeting on issue of environment youtube.com

Hail to the Red Clouds By Bob Drury and Thomas Clavin, The Washington Post
02 November 13

Bob Drury and Thomas Clavin are the authors of "The Heart of Everything That Is: The Untold Story of Red Cloud, an American Legend."

In June 1870, the most powerful American Indian leader in the country, Red Cloud, arrived in Washington with a contingent of Oglala and Brule Sioux. He was treated as a head of state, given tours of the Capitol and the Washington Navy Yard - where he witnessed a gunnery demonstration - and was feted at a White House reception hosted by President Ulysses S. Grant. The former commander of the Union armies may have recognized the significance of Red Cloud accomplishing in two years what Robert E. Lee could not in four: defeating the United States in a war.

What is called Red Cloud's War officially began in 1866 when the Sioux leader could no longer abide the relentless incursions, including the building of U.S. Army forts, into his people's territory. The high point of the war occurred when he and his field commander Crazy Horse wiped out an Army troop of 81 men. President Andrew Johnson's stunned administration sued for peace. In November 1868, Red Cloud signed a treaty to end the fighting - only after burning the Army forts to the ground.

Less than two years later, Red Cloud was in the nation's capital. "He became stunningly famous," historian R. Eli Paul wrote. "Newspapers recounted his every word and deed, and large crowds of onlookers gathered at every public sighting ."

It is time for Red Cloud to return to Washington - on the professional football team's jerseys and in its fighting spirit.

In an Oct. 9 letter to Washington Redskins season-ticket holders, owner Daniel Snyder reiterated his pride in the team and resisted calls to change its name, which Indian groups and others have proclaimed offensive. Snyder emphasized: "Our past isn't just where we came from - it's who we are."

In a response dated three days later and published in The Washington Post, Robert Brave Heart and George Winzenburg, executive vice president and president, respectively, of the Red Cloud Indian School in South Dakota, declared: "As an organization, Red Cloud Indian School has never - and will never - endorse the use of the name 'Redskins.'" They urged Snyder to "engage in further discussion with Native groups across the country and, ultimately, to move toward changing the name, once and for all."

That discussion can be a short one. The team should be renamed for the great leader who is buried on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota, a short walk from the school named after him. Such a move would not only ease tension between American Indians and the NFL, but naming the team after Red Cloud would also signify strength, intelligence and perseverance - qualities any NFL team would be proud to project.

Having grown up on the intense rivalries of the NFC East, we agree with Snyder that the team's tradition and past glories are a big part of "who we are" and "where we came from." Which is why we would hate to see his Washington franchise saddled with a generic animal, mineral, geological or meteorological appellation.

The name change from Redskins to Red Clouds would go a long way toward repairing the relationship between the NFL and American Indians. And it would involve minor alterations to the team's logo and even its famous fight song, which could be sung, without missing a beat, as "Hail to the Red Clouds." Red Cloud's profile would be most appealing on jerseys and banners. Finally, there is precedent for naming an NFL franchise after an individual - the Cleveland Browns took their name from their first head coach, Ohio coaching legend Paul Brown.

At the height of his prowess, Red Cloud controlled a multi-tribal empire whose territory spanned one-fifth of the contiguous United States. Moreover, not only did he manage to unite the fractious Sioux clans, bands and tribes into the most fearsome Indian nation in the West, he was a brilliant strategist. Such was his foresight and courage that he was the only Indian to have defeated the United States in not just a battle but a declared war.

Born to an alcoholic father who died soon thereafter, Red Cloud's future appeared dim in the patriarchal Sioux society. Yet he used his insight, innate leadership skills and fearlessness to forge an Indian alliance across the High Plains. Once he led the Sioux to victory over stronger enemies such as the Pawnee and Crow, and co-opted proud tribes such as the Cheyenne and Arapaho into vassal allies, Red Cloud turned his eye toward the white adventurers, miners and settlers streaming into his territory. They were no match for his military acumen - nor were the U.S. Army officers and soldiers sent to subdue him.

The strategy and tactics designed by Red Cloud and carried out by Crazy Horse - the wiry, young fellow tribesman Red Cloud promoted to field commander - became a guerilla campaign that crippled the Army. Never before had Indians coordinated multiple raids and ambushes hundreds of miles apart or immediately followed up on successful attacks. In December 1866, when his army of braves descended on a frigid battlefield in north-central Wyoming and wiped out the U.S. soldiers under Lt. Col. William Fetterman's command, Red Cloud morphed from a canny guerilla commander to a fearless warrior-chief who brought the U.S. government to its knees.

Red Cloud was one of the most famous American Indians of the 1800s. His trips to Washington to represent the interests of the Sioux and other tribes were covered by newspapers from Chicago to New York to Boston. These same newspapers gave prominent position to his obituary when Red Cloud died in 1909, at age 88.

What football team would not be honored to bear his name? And what general manager and coach would not use Red Cloud's personal story as a template for creating a winning franchise?

Named after such a proud and powerful winner, the Washington Red Clouds would be a lock to emulate their namesake and rout 49ers, defeat Raiders, humiliate Cowboys, pluck Eagles, turn back Texans, break Broncos and generally leave quivering the remaining would-be Giants and Titans of the National Football League.

And that is something for Daniel Snyder to consider.

<http://readersupportednews.org/opinion2/274-41/20206-hail-to-the-red-clouds>

Could Sparkling Glow-in-the-Dark Pavement Replace Street Lights?

www.takepart.com

This energy-efficient technology to illuminate pathways is environmentally friendly, and beautiful.

<http://www.rgj.com/article/20131027/LIV/310270017/Underground-atomic-bomb-test-detonated-near-Fallon-1963?odyssey=obinsite>

THE LUNDIN TIMES

thelundintimes.blogspot.com

I have officially arrived in La Sierra Nevada! Research and initial writing of my new book, presenting the spiritual and environmental message of the Elders (the Mamos) of the four indigenous peoples of La Sierra - the Kogi, Arhuacos, Cankuamo, and Wiwa - is officially underway. After spending four...

Jalisa Ross, Miss Oklahoma City University

www.youtube.com

Jalisa Ross (Creek, Cherokee, and Otoe-Missouri) is a senior majoring in political science at Oklahoma City University, where she is the reigning Miss Indian...

Aim West

For Immediate Public Release: AIM-WEST activities for Month of November

Greetings my relatives!

AIM-WEST, a San Francisco community based inter-tribal organization, presents a list of activities we are hosting during November and we encourage the public to participate in these and on-going projects.

Please mark your calendars and consider supporting these events and bring the family! Circulate among friends, students, academics, and the media;

On Saturday, November 9, a benefit will be held for AIM-WEST, at Arlene Francis Center for Spirit, Art and Politics! It is located at 99 6th Street in Santa Rosa. Come on out and listen to nationally renowned “Scatter Their Own” an Indian band direct from Pine Ridge, South Dakota led by Scottie Clifford. Also on the ticket is hard rock and blues with Sampson Wolf and the “Thunder Wolf” band of Indians, with lots to deliver! Doors open at 6 pm program begins at 7 pm. $7-10 sliding scale. There will be refreshments, a raffle, and vendors! This is coming right up and we need everyone’s support to get the word out that this is the place to be!

Monday and Tuesday, November 25-26, from 9 am to 5 pm AIM-WEST as host presents its 6th annual conference at the California Institute of Integral Studies, located at 1453 Mission St. (btwn 10th & 11th St.) in San Francisco. The agenda will include time for solidarity statements from allies and supporters. Among the topics to be discussed include the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) and the recent US Supreme Court decision regarding baby Veronica Brown; Militarization of the US border, and Immigration; Extractive Industries and mining, and forced re-location; Leonard Peltier, prison, youth and the justice system; Climate Change and REDD; a UN hosted World Conference for Indigenous Peoples (WCIP) planned in September 2014; the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples; and consider a national strategy to address the use of Indian peoples as mascots in sports.

For more information call 415-575-6100. There will be special guest speakers, with Mr. Bill Means as the Facilitator, with a major focus on topics of regional, national and international interests, strategy sessions and much more. This event is free and open to the public.

Wednesday, November 27th, AIM-WEST hosts its annual feast, or Unthanksgiving Dinner, where the Eagle meets the Condor. The dinner will be held at the Baha’i Center, located at 170 Valencia Street, in San Francisco. We will have a traditional turkey dinner, and cultural diverse performances by Mexica and California dancers, drummers, singers, and vendors will be on hand to welcome the public. There will also be a guest speaker to deliver the State of the Indian Nation’s Report, and much more! Please come dine with us and celebrate our strength and unity as peoples, as Indigenous nations. The doors open at 12 noon and dinner served from 2 to 4 pm. the event closes at 5 pm. this is a free event. Volunteers are welcome. Please call me at 415-577-1492 if you wish to help.

Thursday, November 28th, the annual Sun Rise Gathering at Alcatraz Island to honor the men and women who took back the ROCK in November 1969 until June 1971, and set the stage that changed the social fabric of North America's treatment toward Indigenous peoples. Leaves from Pier #33, come early 4 am, 5 boats, tickets are limited to 3500. All boats return by 9 am. Check Horn Blower website for price information.

Friday, November 29th, the second annual Native American Day "Red n Blues" Concert! A benefit in the heart of San Francisco's Mission District, at The Brava Theater, located at 2781 24th Street (five blocks from 24th St. BART Station). This is a benefit for AIM-WEST and we will show-case for you three irresistible Indian bands! Opening the show is solo guitarist Daniel Rodriguez, and from Northern California back by popular demand is Paul and Rich Steward of "Twice as Good". Also, from the Oakland flatland is "The Bob Young Project"! And once again joining us is "Dr. T and the Blues Criminals" to round off the evening! Doors open at 6:30 and first performance begins at 7:15 pm. Tickets are $15, or on line for $12 at www.brava.org There will be raffles, refreshments, vendors, and much more! Show ends at 11 pm.

AIM-WEST will provide more details about each event, program and performances on our website as time proceeds. On behalf of AIM-WEST, I thank you for your support and consideration for attending these activities.

If you wish to donate to AIM-WEST please write checks to our fiscal sponsors, C/O: La Raza Centro Legal, Inc. Located at 474 Valencia Street, San Francisco, CA 94103 (415-3500). Your support helps us continue providing technical assistance to the inter-tribal bay area communities.

All My Relations, Antonio Gonzales, AIM-WEST Director, www.aimwest.info
415-577-1492 www.aimovement.org www.whoisleonardpeltier.info

German intelligence files on ex-Nazis shredded

Investigators have found that in 2007 the German Intelligence Service (BND) destroyed files of 250 BND employees who had been in the Nazi SS or Gestapo.

The BND confirmed the loss, calling it "regrettable and annoying".

Four independent historians are investigating the BND's old links with the Nazis. They say some of the missing papers concern suspected war criminals.

The historians did not allege a deliberate cover-up, but they urged the BND not to destroy any more files.

They said the BND should consult them before shredding any more documents, and called for a full investigation into the 2007 incident.

One of the historians, Dresden Professor Klaus-Dietmar Henke, said "it is not the case that the BND somehow deliberately destroyed the files of all those with Nazi links".

According to the BND, the destroyed files relate to about 2% of the archive currently being investigated by the historians. The files were destroyed because they were not deemed to be worth keeping, the BND said.

The investigation into the BND's Nazi roots began in February.

Reinhard Gehlen, who set up the BND after World War II, spied on the Soviet Union for the Nazis during the war.

About 10% of BND recruits during the Cold War had previously served in the SS, the German news website Spiegel reports.

Spiegel says the BND told it that in the 1990s documents about a top wanted Nazi, former SS Capt Alois Brunner, were destroyed. www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-europe-15968698

AASLH Session Proposals Due November 15, 2013 Download Session Proposal Form

Tips for Developing a Strong Session Proposal

Nothing can replace the opportunities that arise when you intersect with people who come together around common goals and interests — good history and good times. In 2014, the AASLH Annual Meeting in St. Paul enables us to explore ways to be “greater than the sum of our parts.”

Minneapolis and St. Paul, the “Twin Cities,” developed to meet different needs. St. Paul grew as the state capital and the port at the head of navigation on the Mississippi, while Minneapolis developed around the industrially powerful and majestic Falls of St. Anthony. Minneapolis and St. Paul complement one another just as so many historical organizations across the country do today. Their historic partnership — and occasional good-natured ribbing — serves as a vibrant example of how strategic networks of complementary efforts benefit everyone.

Session and Workshop proposals are now being accepted.

Come see why History Matters in Minnesota, and how working together makes it matter even more. We look forward to seeing you in St. Paul.

Download the Session Proposal Form to view the entire theme and instructions for submission.

Proposals for sessions or workshops for the 2014 Annual Meeting must be submitted on a Call for Proposals form. You may submit the form via email, fax, or mail.

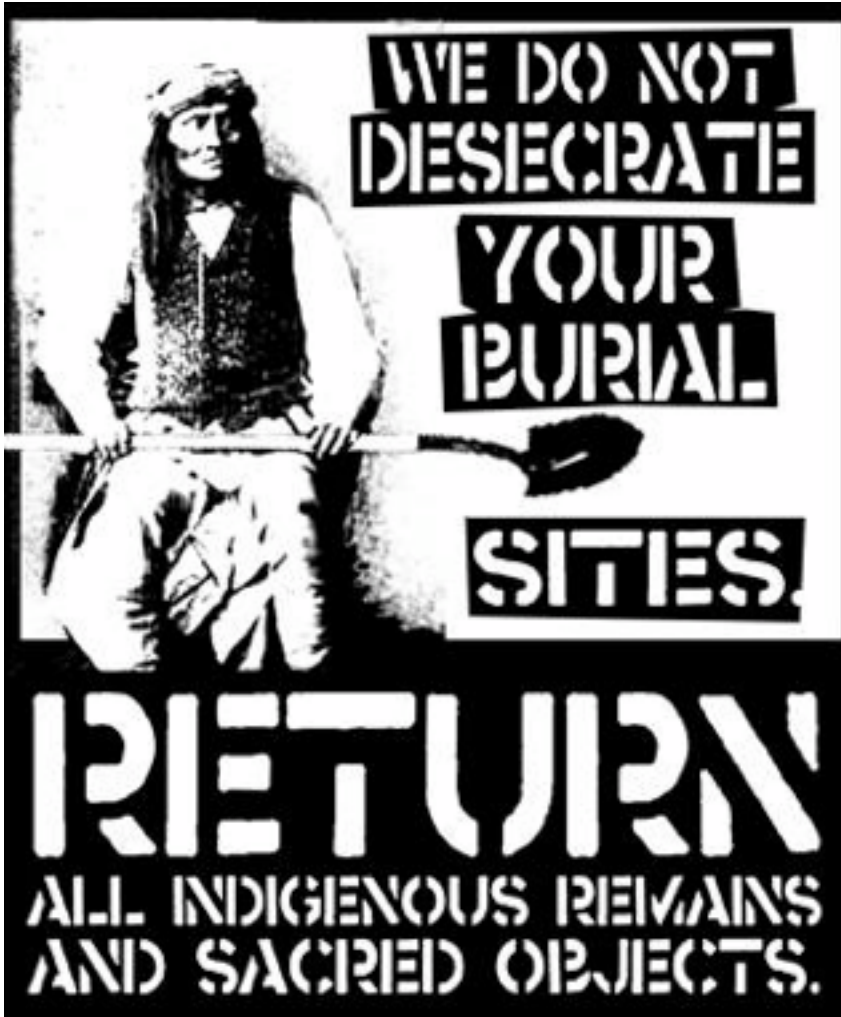

Deadline: November 15, 2013

For more information, please contact: Bethany Hawkins hawkins@aslh.org 615-320-3203

NCAI NAMES NEW PRESIDENT, BRIAN CLADOOSBY: "Congress Must Act Immediately To Provide Rapid Recovery For Our Tribes And Work To Ensure That Political Gamesmanship And Inactivity Does Not Harm Native Peoples Again." - - In his first statement after being sworn in as the 21st president of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), Brian Cladoosby – Chairman of the Swinomish Indian Tribal Community – called for

reduced thresholds for federal tribal disaster assistance and challenged Congress to prioritize Native peoples in the post-shutdown legislative calendar, including acting on the Farm Bill. For more info., visit www.ncai.org.

NATIVE COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS HONORED FOR EXCELLENCE: Two Native CDFIs were awarded and recognized amongst their peers as leaders in the field. The Circle of Honor Award recognizes a Native CDFI that is successfully increasing access to capital and financial resources in Native communities by developing innovative loan products, promoting community development and overcoming challenges. The 2013 Circle of Honor Award winner is Northwest Native Development Fund (NNDF), a Native CDFI located in Nespelam, Washington. NNDF was created by a group of tribal members to build financial strength and provide economic empowerment of all people. NNDF also works collaboratively with state and tribal governments to improve the infrastructure and economic opportunities on the reservations. The Visionary Leader Award for Outstanding Achievement recognizes a person who has made a long-term contribution to the Native CDFI industry and whose humble, selfless demeanor inspires others.

Gerald Sherman, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Indian Land Capital Company (ILCC) in Roscoe, Montana, was selected to receive the 2013 Visionary Leader Award.

Sherman started the Lakota Fund, one of the first microlending institutions in the U.S. and currently serves as CEO and President of ILCC, a Native CDFI that provides alternative loan options to Indian nations for tribal land acquisition. ILCC has made more than $7 million in loans to tribes in five states that hope to return some 30,000 acres of land. For more info. on the awardees, please visit their websites at www.thenndf.org and www.ilcc.net.

NAVAJO HOUSING AUTHORITY RECEIVES ADOH HOUSING HERO AWARD: The 2013 Brian Mickelsen Housing Hero Awards recognize outstanding service by individuals and organizations for their commitment to numerous housing issues throughout the state. The awards are named in honor of the outstanding public service exemplified by the late Brian Mickelsen, an original member of the Arizona Housing Finance Authority and former city manager for the Town of Cottonwood. This year's Tribal Initiatives Award was awarded to the Navajo Housing Authority (NHA). NHA conducted a housing survey among the Navajo people identifying an immediate need for 34,000 homes in 110 communities across the Navajo Nation. Based on the housing need, the NHA, working with Swaback Partners, created a Sustainable Community Master Planning Initiative. Today NHA is getting ready to start building the first five demonstration housing sites and this construction will continue for the next 5-10 years to start meeting the housing needs of the Navajo Nation. For more info., visit <http://www.azhousing.gov/azcms/uploads/PRESS%20ROOM/PR%209-20-13.pdf>

HONORING OUR VETERANS: The National Park Service will honor all military veterans with special events and free entrance to all 401 national parks for everyone during the long Veterans Day weekend, Nov. 9 - 11. "Every national park tells a part of the American story, and many of the parks have a direct connection to those who have served in the military through the years," said National Park Service Director Jonathan B. Jarvis. "I invite everyone to come to a national park to commemorate Veterans Day, whether it is to learn more about those who have given so much to defend our freedoms or to simply enjoy the beauty and majesty of the land they fought to protect." Read more at <http://www.nativenewsnetwork.com/national-parks-commemorate-veterans-day-with-free-admission.html>

SMART GROWTH AMERICA 2014 OFFERS FREE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE WORKSHOPS: Smart Growth America's free technical assistance workshops program helps city and regional leaders find solutions to local issues and concerns. Smart Growth America will offer 12 types of workshops as part of this free program. These workshops help participating communities to grow in ways that benefit families and businesses while protecting the environment and preserving a sense of place. Any unit or subdivision of local government, Indian tribe or regional government is eligible to apply for these free workshops. Applications are due by Dec. 6, 2013. For more info. contact Chelsea Hogan, assistance@smartgrowthamerica.org, or 202-207-3355 x143.

From the Eagle Watch November 4, 2013

This article was forwarded to us by a reader. Kittoh

The main story is posted below Glenn Carroll's note, which is posted first:

There is an important small book "Discounted Casualties," translated from the original Japanese by Elizabeth Baldwin that recounts more than 100 testimonies by UK and US soldiers of health and genetic side effects to them AND their families from use of DU in Bosnia and 1st Iraq war. Talk about killing your own. ~ Glenn

Glenn Carroll, Coordinator, Nuclear Watch South
P.O. Box 8574 | Atlanta, GA 404-378-4263 | 404-432-8727 cell <http://www.nonukesyall.org>

UK Queen in depleted uranium trade <<http://youtu.be/Jm6P5sDXs3k>><http://youtu.be/Jm6P5sDXs3k> Published on Aug 5, 2013

Britain's Queen Elizabeth is one of the richest women on earth and much of her profits are from arms trade including the notorious depleted uranium trade.

The British monarch has managed to increase her wealth from £300 million early in her 60-year reign to £17 billion at present thanks to investments in arms firms that produce uranium used in depleted uranium (DU) shells, including Rio Tinto Zinc.

DU shells are notorious for their ability to pierce armor and kill targets due to their deadly radioactive features.

The video cites the American nuclear radiation expert Jay M. Gould assaying in his 1996 book titled "The Enemy Within: the High Cost of Living Near Nuclear Reactors" that the British royal family, especially the Queen herself, privately own investments in uranium holding worth some £4 billion through Rio Tinto Zinc.

The mining company, originally named Rio Tinto Mines, was allegedly created for the British Royal family in the late 1950's by Ronald Walter Rowland, the Queen's "buccaneer".

The video argues that the Queen and other royals have been investing in the death trade of depleted uranium globally with little ethical concerns for the consequences of their profiteering. DU weapons were first used by the US military during the first Persian Gulf War against Iraq in 1991.

The US Defense Ministry estimated that between 315 and 350 tons of DU bombs, shells and bullets were fired during the conflict

There are allegations that American and British troops used more than five times as many such weapons as the total number used in the 1991 war in Iraq.

The US has confirmed the use of depleted uranium in both wars but refuses to disclose the scale of the use.

Iraq has seen a sharp rise in the number of children with leukemia and genetic malformation in the decades after the First Persian Gulf War that are attributed to the use of DU weapons.

FREE Forum
Ask the Experts About Global Warming
Global Warming

Adapting in the Sierra Nevada and Great Basin

By: League of Women Voters of Northern Nevada
And Sierra Nevada Forums

Tuesday, November 12 at Unitarian Universalist Church
780 Del Monte Lane, Reno, Nevada
(just a few blocks west of Neil Rd. exit off #395)
Doors open 5:30; Presentation at 6:00

Dr. Michael Dettinger
U. S. Geological Survey National Research Program
Research Associate of Climate, Atmospheric Sciences & Physical Oceanography Division at Scripps Institute, La Jolla, Cal.

Moderated by
Dr. James Thomas
Professor and Executive Director of Division of Hydrologic Sciences at Desert Research Institute, Reno and Las Vegas, Nevada

Questions on Forum: Call Jan Browne 762-1765