The Doris Duke Western History Collection From the University of Oklahoma Libraries Interested in listening to oral histories? The Doris Duke Western History Collection is now available for listening at the Library. Between 1967-1972, hundreds of Indians in Oklahoma were interviewed to share their culture and history of their respective tribe. Of those interviewees, several were Osages. Transcripts are also available for reading. Call us at 918-287-5580 for more information or come in Monday through Friday, 8am to 4:30pm. You may also visit OU's library website at <http://digital.libraries.ou.edu/homehistory.php>

The 6th Annual Osage Cultural Walk dates have been set for October 11-12, 2014.

SUMMER LIFEGUARD JOBS STILL OPEN

The city of Las Vegas is holding lifeguard tryouts at Municipal Pool, 431 E. Bonanza Road (at Las Vegas Boulevard). Summer lifeguard jobs pay $9-$13 per hour, up to 40 hours per week. The city of Las Vegas offers American Red Cross certification classes needed to become a lifeguard. One class certifies you in lifeguard training, first-aid and CPR/AED. Call the pool at 702-229-6309 to register for the next class and to schedule your interview.

UPCOMING TRAINING AVAILABLE

The International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) will hold a Law Enforcement Leadership Institute on Juvenile Justice, designed for law enforcement executives either first or second in command, in Seattle, Washington, September 16-18, 2014. IACP is a fellow strategic partner with The National League of Cities on the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation’s Models for Change initiative. Due to the generosity of the MacArthur Foundation, up to 30 law enforcement executives will be able to attend this intensive three-day Institute at no cost. Law enforcement executives will learn about the latest strategies and tools to increase capacity to respond to juvenile offenders and at-risk youth and receive information about building effective partnerships to support juvenile justice reform in their communities. You will find the Institute application and an overview of the agenda at <http://www.theiacp.org/jjleadershipinstitute>.

FEDERAL GRANT OPPORTUNITIES

The U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) has announced the creation of the National Center for Building Community Trust and Justice grant initiative. The purpose of this initiative is to enhance procedural justice, reduce bias, and support racial reconciliation between the justice system and communities of color. Components of DOJ have partnered to administer the Community Trust initiative, which is part of My Brother’s Keeper, a national call to invest in collaborative, multi-disciplinary approaches to build resilience, empower, and foster community engagement and participation for young men and boys of color. Eligible applicants are limited to national, regional, state, or local public and private entities, including non-profit organizations (including tribal nonprofit organizations), faith-based and community organizations, institutions of higher education (including tribal institutions of higher education), and units of local government. The $4.75 million Community Trust initiative seeks five sites to implement and test strategies to enhance procedural justice, reduce implicit bias, and support racial reconciliation in communities of color. Access the details at <http://www.ojjdp.gov/grants/solicitations/FY2014/NCBCTJ.pdf>. Advance registration is required and applications must be submitted by June 18.

The U.S. Department of Education has announced nearly $10 million in funding for the Project Prevent Grant Program. This program will provide grants to local educational agencies to increase their capacity to identify, assess, and provide mental health services to students exposed to pervasive violence; support conflict resolution programs; and implement school-based prevention strategies that reduce the likelihood that these students will commit future acts of violence. Applications are due by June 30, 2014. Access the solicitation online at <http://www2.ed.gov/programs/projectprevent/index.html>.

CHILD WELFARE & JUVENILE JUSTICE RESEARCH

A new white paper, "From Conversation to Collaboration: How Child Welfare and Juvenile Justice Agencies Can Work Together to Improve Outcomes for Dual Status Youth," highlights strategies that youth-serving systems can apply to begin developing a more integrated approach and achieve better outcomes for children and families. Released by another strategic partner of Models for Change, the Robert F. Kennedy National Resource Center for Juvenile Justice, led by Robert F.

Kennedy Children's Action Corps, the paper describes some of the challenges facing dual status youth, outlines the benefits of collaboration, and provides guidance for practitioners to begin a conversation.

Find the paper at <http://www.rfknrcjj.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/05/RFK-whitepaper-April2014.pdf>.

The National Council on Crime and Delinquency (NCCD) has produced a series of reports regarding the dramatic reduction of youth incarceration rates in most US states over the past 10 years. NCCD studied the de-incarceration trend through interviews with key stakeholders, listening sessions in five states, a national convening of juvenile justice leaders, and the compilation and analysis of county-level data from five jurisdictions. With the newest release in this series, Supervision Strategies for Justice Involved Youth, NCCD addresses the supervision of youth in the community. Juvenile justice stakeholders are creating smart and effective supervision strategies in an effort to keep more youth in their homes and communities rather than in out-of-home placements and secure facilities. Email National League of Cities Institute for Youth, Education and Families Senior Associate Laura Furr at furr@nlc.org for more information or call her at 202-626-3072.

CEDAR THE HEALER

Read more at: http://www.ringingcedarsofrussia.org/cedar nut oil & cedar nuts.php

The Siberian 'Cedar' (also known in the West as the Siberian pine) is one off the most beautiful and majestic trees on the Earth. Ever since the very earliest times it has been considered a life-giving, healing tree. Cedar wood excretes phytoncids, which destroy disease-inducing micro-organisms and serve to purify the air with healing and healthful properties. In the Old Testament (Leviticus 14: 4) God teaches how to heal people and even disinfect dwellings with the help of... the Cedar.

Scientists note that Cedar-panelled rooms are practically bacteria-free, down to 200–300 bacterial cells per cubic metre. It should be pointed out that according to medical standards, even in operating rooms a level of 500–1000 non-pathogenic microbes per cubic metre is permitted.

Cedar walls emit positive energy. In Cedar houses the air is always clean.

Siberian Cedar timber has a beautiful composition, with a lovely rosy colour. The noble colour of this sacred tree delights one's eyes and cheers one's mood year after year. Cedar timber is resilient against decay, and is hardly ever subject to canker-worm.

The cedar tree and the cedar nut oil have a special spirit and influence. They eliminate tension, increases bodily immunity, and facilitates rapid health recovery after a difficult disease or operation.

The Siberian Cedar is the beauty and national pride of Russia.

Residents of Siberia use Cedar wood in their everyday lives. Carpenters lay down Cedar floorboards in peasant huts, which are both beautiful to look at and warm to the touch. The Cedar's resinous wood wards off all sorts of bugs, and thus has been used from the very earliest times to make furniture, including trunks, wardrobes, cupboards and dressing tables. Cedar furniture is never troubled by moths, but even when dresser drawers or trunks were made of other kinds of wood, they would invariably place cedar cones in them. Just like the wood, Cedar cones ward off bugs with their scent.

Peasants in certain regions believed the Cedar wood killed harmful microbes. And so they preferred to make the bottom and lid of birch-bark cylinders out of Cedar. In Western Europe cedar wood was used in the manufacture of milk jugs. The craftsmen claimed that milk kept in such a jug would last a long time before spoiling and would take on a pleasant flavour.

All products made from Cedar possess a powerful beneficial energy.

Pow Wow 2014

2014 August 2nd Indian Fair Days

The Museum needs your support in keeping our Pow Wow alive! This is a community event that promotes and instills pride in our Native and non-Native families. Our Pow Wow gives our younger generations a chance to dance and celebrate our rich traditional history with dancing and culture.

We began the Pow Wow and Fair Days in 1971 as a fundraiser. Over the years, it has become more difficult for the museum to sponsor without extra support. Therefore, we are asking for your help.

This year our event will be ONE-DAY ONLY, Saturday August 2, 2014.

Our Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Frankie Williams is donating his time this year.

Some of the competition dances you can sponsor are as follows:

Men's Traditional – $200

Men's Fancy and Grass – $200

Women's Traditional – $200

Women's Fancy and Jingle – $200

Teen Boy Traditional – $150

Teen Boy Fancy and Grass – $150

Teen Girl Traditional – $150

Teen Girl Fancy and Jingle – $150

Jr. Boy Traditional – $100

Jr. Boy Fancy and Grass – $100

Jr. Girl Traditional – $100

Jr. Girl Fancy and Jingle – $100

Deadline for sponsoring is June 30, 2014. All sponsors will be promoted on our Pow Wow t-shirt. Please contact the Museum if you feel like sponsoring in a different way.

Our number is (559) 877-2115. We appreciate your consideration and support.

The Stream: New York City’s Groundwater Plan Worries Nearby Counties

The largest city in the United States wants to revive dozens of groundwater wells on Long Island as a temporary supply, Newsday reports. The new sources will be needed in 2021 when New York shuts down one of its upstate aqueducts for at least 10 months to repair leaks. Long Island residents fear that added pumping will cause salt water to infiltrate the aquifer and that the city will keep the taps open even after it completes the repairs.

On the West Coast

A living river will once again flow through Los Angeles. The Army Corps of Engineers recommended a $US 1 billion restoration project for an 18 kilometer (11 mile) stretch of the city’s namesake river, the Los Angeles Times reports.

Because of the drought, California officials have started prohibiting some farmers and small cities from taking water from rivers, National Geographic reports. These users hold junior water rights, which are the first to be cut in a shortage. The Russian River and Sacramento River watersheds are the first to be affected.

The growth of large dairies, which milk thousands of cows which produce millions of pounds of manure annually, are increasingly a cause for worry, according to Yale Environment 360. All that waste often ends up in waterways. This is a source of conflict in Wisconsin where regulators have fined dairies for contaminating groundwater.

Water Supplies

Since the state water utility began rationing in May in response to drought, residents of Caracas, Venezuela are spending hours a day queuing for water, Businessweek reports. Bottled water is difficult if not impossible to find on supermarket shelves.

Oklahoma’s Republican governor signed a bill that paves the way for wastewater to be used for drinking water, the Daily Ardmoreite reports. The bill creates a permitting process for potable reuse projects like the one being considered by Norman, the state’s third-largest city.

Milwaukee’s water utility will request a 10 percent rate increase this year due to the cost of repairing a record number of water main breaks, according to the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel. Thanks to a polar winter, more mains broke in the first three months of 2014 than in an average year.

The privilege enjoyed by The City for a century -- the ability to draw water from the Tuolumne River, store it in Yosemite National Park and sell it to customers all over the Bay Area -- is on track to be yanked by the state next month.

TRIBAL NATIONS WORKING TO ENSURE RAIL SAFETY FOR ALL AMERICANS

WASHINGTON — May 30, 2014 — Tribal Nations across the country are working to ensure the safety of all Americans by working with the main railroad companies and two Federal agencies to implement Positive Train Control (PTC) along 60,000 miles of railroad tracks. Tribal Nations will be active participants in the deployment of about 20,000 PTC telecommunication poles and wayside structures that will be installed along railroad tracks that are located almost exclusively in the continental United States.

“This is the dawn of a new era in the relationship between Indian tribes and the railroads,” stated D. Bambi Kraus, president of the National Association of Tribal Historic Preservation Officers (NATHPO). “There are many challenges ahead, but for the first time in 150 years, Indian tribes and Tribal Historic Preservation Officers (THPOs) will be working together with the railroads to accomplish the shared goal of making the railways safer, without sacrificing the tribal history that is located along those same tracks.”

In the past year, the Federal Communication Commission (FCC), the federal Advisory Council on Historic Preservation (ACHP), Indian Nations, and the railroads have been working together to develop a working system that expedites the placement of PTC poles and structures along the railroad tracks by using the existing efficiency of the Tower Construction Notification System (TCNS) that Indian tribes have been using for 10 years. TCNS is a modern, technological efficiency that will be modified for the PTC process and will be supplemented with other more traditional clearance processes related to complying with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA).

In addition to the estimated 20,000 PTC poles and structures to be considered in the next year or so, there were an additional 10,000 PTC poles and structures that were prematurely installed prior to complying with the NHPA. In its oversight role of our nation’s airwaves and ensuring compliance with the NHPA, the FCC negotiated a $10 million settlement with the Class 1 railroads that will address the 10,000 poles through the creation of a Cultural Resource Fund to support preservation efforts; it will be operative later this year. Indian tribes that have been affected by the premature poles will be eligible to request financial assistance from the Fund.

“For the past 10 years, the FCC has worked with Indian tribes on a government-to-government basis to put into place important baseline processes, such as the TCNS system,” stated Robert Cast, THPO for the Caddo Nation of Oklahoma and NATHPO board member. “The hard work in those early years – between Indian tribes and the FCC – have served us well and will continue serving us as we head into this next phase of PTC deployment.”

~~~~~ Additional Information

PTC: The Rail Safety Improvement Act of 2008 requires freight and passenger railroads to deploy interoperable Positive Train Control systems, generally radio signals between trains and a land-base network to prevent certain railroad accidents. PTC applies to all Class 1 railroad lines that carry poison- or toxic-by-inhalation hazardous materials and five million gross tons or more of annual traffic and any railroad’s main line tracks over which intercity or commuter rail passenger train service is regularly provided.

TCNS: Indian tribes have been using the Tower Construction Notification System on a national level for more than 10 years and it is considered a state-of-the-art modern efficiency in conducting local tribal consultation. It is looked to as one of, if not the most, effective tool to consult with Indian tribes on the local level and is used throughout the country; it was created in response to the siting of cell tower structures. The FCC created and operates the TCNS system. For more information, see: http://wireless.fcc.gov/outreach/index.htm?job=tower\_notification

THPO: Authorized in the 1992 amendments to the National Historic Preservation Act, the Tribal Historic Preservation Program is an active expression of tribal sovereignty as THPOs assume the responsibilities of the State Historic Preservation Officers for their tribal lands and properties of traditional cultural and religious importance off tribal lands. Starting with 12 Indian tribes in 1996, the program has grown to more than 150 tribes participating in the program today. Unfortunately, the amount of support from the Historic Preservation Fund that supports both the THPOs and SHPOs has not kept pace with tribal participation and the level of support has been kept at an artificially low level. In 1996, each THPO program received an average of $80,000 per year. Today the average THPO receives less than $60,000 each year to support their work.

FCC: The Federal Communications Commission is involved in the PTC implementation due to their role in licensing radio spectrum to the railroads or their affiliates. The FCC determined that the construction of PTC transmission facilities and their supporting structures is a federal undertaking and thus must comply with the National Historic Preservation Act.

ACHP: The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation was created in 1966 and is an independent federal agency that promotes the preservation, enhancement, and productive use of our nation's historic resources, and advises the President and Congress on national historic preservation policy. The Council played an important role in the PTC development process by providing assistance to the FCC in adopting an efficiency process that both complies with the NHPA and also ensures that local stakeholders (Indian tribes) are involved to ensure that tribal historic properties are not destroyed as part of this federal initiative to deploy PTC.

NHPA: The National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (Public Law 89-665; 16 U.S.C. 470 et seq.) created a federal process to preserve historical and archaeological sites in the United States, including creating the National Register of Historic Places, the list of National Historic Landmarks, and the State and Tribal Historic Preservation Offices.

RAILROAD SETTLEMENT: For more information on the settlement, see the FCC website, 5/19/14 press release, FCC Announces Two Actions to Facilitate Positive Train Control Implementation: <http://www.fcc.gov/encyclopedia/positive-train-control-ptc>
