National Funding

Support for Efforts to Foster Foundation Openness

Fund for Shared Insight: Increasing Foundation Openness

The Fund for Shared Insight is a multi-year collaborative effort among funders that pools resources to make grants to improve philanthropy. The Fund's Increasing Foundation Openness request for proposals (RFP) supports nonprofit partners who are interested in increasing foundation openness in service of effectiveness. The Fund believes that if foundations are more open – which is defined as how they share about their goals and strategies, make decisions and measure progress, listen and engage in dialogue with others, act on what they hear, and share what they themselves have learned – they will be more effective. This RFP will support new or existing efforts to increase foundation openness among staffed foundations in the United States. Examples of the types of activities that might be funded include the following: foundation sharing and dialogue on what works and what doesn't, foundations engaging in high-quality feedback loops, and advancing the knowledge and practice of foundation openness. Proposals must be submitted by May 20, 2016. Visit the Fund's website to download the RFP.

AIDS United, in collaboration with the HRSA HIV/AIDS Bureau's Special Projects of National Significance (SPNS) and Boston University's School of Public Health, is offering support through a new initiative called Dissemination of Evidence-Informed Interventions. Under this initiative, AIDS United recently released a request for proposals (RFP) for the "Integrating Buprenorphine Treatment for Opioid Use Disorder in HIV Primary Care" intervention. This intervention will replicate and adapt a prior SPNS initiative that focuses on using Buprenorphine in HIV-primary care settings to decrease opioid use, increase medication adherence, and improve the quality of life for people living with HIV. Three Ryan White-Funded Medical Providers across the country will be awarded $200,000 to $300,000 annually to implement this three-year program. Proposals must be submitted by May 3, 2016. Visit the AIDS United website to download the RFP.

“Language is a city to the building of which every human being brought a stone.”

~Emerson

A.Word.A.Day with Anu Garg

A language is a very democratic thing. People who use it own it. No royalty or committee can dictate it. Some may try to dam its flow, but they rarely succeed.

If people find a word useful, they'll use it, even if they have to borrow it from another language. If they need a word to describe something new, they will coin a word for it. Sometimes they repurpose existing words for new purposes. So grows language.

Like people, the only languages that do not grow are those that are dead. This week we'll feature five coined words. Well, all words are coined words in the sense that someone used them for the first time. It's just that we know for certain who used this week's words for the very first time and when.

snowclone PRONUNCIATION: (SNO-klon)

MEANING: noun: A cliché adapted to a new use.

For example, a statement of the form “X is the new Y” (such as “Gray is the new black”). See more examples here.

ETYMOLOGY:

Coined by economics professor Glen Whitman in 2004, after the popular (but erroneous) idea that Eskimos have many words for snow, which is extended by others into the form: If Eskimos have N words for snow, X surely have N words for Y.

USAGE:

“The next time you read about a ‘hidden epidemic’, be aware that you are drifting into a snowclone: recent hidden epidemics have involved chlamydia, illiteracy, autism, and gambling.” David Rowan; The Next Big Thing; The Times (London, UK); Dec 3, 2005.

As the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) moves forward on plans to remove Greater Yellowstone grizzly bears from the Endangered Species List, and states release their postdelisting plans, things are looking bad for the bears.

Wyoming, Montana and Idaho will have the authority to eliminate bears entirely in some areas, which could destroy the potential to connect with other grizzly bear populations, key to a healthy future.

Plans would allow for excessive bear deaths for years without review, and introduce the potential for trophy hunting.

If federal and state managers allow Greater Yellowstone grizzly recovery to slip, it could reverse decades of bear progress, in a matter of years. The bears deserve better!

Tell US Fish and Wildlife Service Director Ashe to do the right thing -- protect Greater Yellowstone grizzlies!

The recovery of the iconic Greater Yellowstone Grizzly is one of the west's greatest wildlife success stories, until now.

If proposed plans are put in place, any areas outside Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks could become grizzly hunting grounds, even in the J.D. Rockefeller Jr. Parkway connecting the parks. This and other grizzly passageways are critical to allow for different bear populations to meet and breed, and create more stable populations.

If Greater Yellowstone grizzlies can't use the little wild land they have left to feed, raise their families and connect with other grizzlies, their chances of long term success are slim. Combined with stalling population growth, lost food sources, and fewer cubs living to adulthood, current state and federal proposals could spell a quick decline for the vulnerable bears.

**You can stop this -- speak up for the bears today. Tell US Fish and Wildlife Service to give Greater Yellowstone grizzlies the future they deserve!**

Thanks for all you do to protect iconic western wildlife, and the future of the Greater Yellowstone grizzly!
