Support for U.S. Cities to Address Barriers to Better Health

Invest Health

Invest Health, a collaboration between the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and The Reinvestment Fund, seeks to fundamentally change the way cities improve opportunities for their citizens to live healthy lives. Through the initiative, teams of leaders from up to 50 mid-sized cities will be selected to participate in an 18-month effort designed to accelerate municipal capacity to take action to address the multiple determinants of health in low-income communities. These changes can focus on increasing access to quality jobs, affordable housing, nutritious food, and reducing crime rates and environmental hazards. Teams from all mid-sized cities (populations between 50,000 and 400,000) across the United States or its territories are invited to apply. Up to 50 cities will be selected to receive a grant award of up to $60,000 toward participation in the initiative. To apply, teams from each participant city must include five cross-sector leaders representing, at a minimum, the public sector, community development/finance, and an academic or health-related anchor institution. Letters of intent are due January 29, 2016. Visit the Invest Health website to download the Call for Proposals.

Animal Welfare Organizations Funded

PETCO Foundation: Sheltering and Adoptions Grants

The PETCO Foundation's mission is to raise the quality of life for pets and people who love and need them. The first application cycle of 2016 will be open from January 1 through February 15. Visit the Foundation's website to download the Sheltering and Adoption Grant Instructions.

Grants Improve Access to Better Lives Nationwide

Applications will be accepted in all four funding cycles for programs within the scope of one of the following Focused Giving areas: Career Opportunity, Hunger Relief and Healthy Eating, or Disaster Preparedness. Organizations seeking funding for programs outside of the Focused Giving areas, and whose programs address the unmet needs of underserved low-income populations, can apply in cycles three and four only. The primary mission of the Amelia Peabody Foundation is to increase the number, range, and depth of positive learning experiences available to materially disadvantaged young people living in the cities and towns of Massachusetts. Most grants are provided to nonprofit organizations that offer programs for underserved inner-city youth. Grants may help an existing organization to increase its capacity for service where it is currently situated; however, occasionally grants help an organization to establish a new facility where no such facility exists, bringing services to a neighborhood for the first time. Examples of organizations supported by Foundation grants include neighborhood and community centers, charter schools, out-of-school time programs with educational enrichment and mentoring components, etc. Most grants fall in the $10,000 to $50,000 range. Requests are reviewed quarterly. The application deadlines for 2016 are January 19, April 12, July 12, and October 4. Visit the Foundation's website to review the application guidelines.

The Fund is open to arts nonprofits throughout California, with preference given to those in the San Joaquin Valley, and Riverside and San Bernardino counties. Applying organizations should have an annual operating budget of at least $100,000. Grants of up to $250,000 per year over two years are offered. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit—the circuit that serves Nevada—has adopted new rules to deal with a modern problem.

Since the advent of the internet, some citations in filings with the court have been by web address. Of course, web links are moving targets and court filings are supposed to be forever.

“Since 2008, court librarians in the Ninth Circuit have been tracking citations to online resources and preserving original documents and/or web pages as Adobe PDF files,” the court said in a statement. “Although stored on the court website, www.ca9.uscourts.gov/library/webcites, the availability of these files is not readily apparent to legal researchers.”

Up to now, in other words, the court's staff has been creating PDF copies of material cited by lawyers in their filings and posting them online on a separate webpage against the possibility that the web links will go dead. Now, however, they will be adding those copies to the court docket instead of that separate location so they can be found more easily.

Asked why the court doesn't require attorneys to include the PDFs with their filings instead of having court staff generate them, assistant court executive David Madden said, “That could be the next step, but for now we are making them more easily accessible.”

Statement by SBA Administrator Maria Contreras-Sweet on Small Business Committee Hearing

WASHINGTON – Maria Contreras-Sweet, the Administrator of the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA), today issued the following statement prior to her testimony before the House Small Business Committee:

“Since joining SBA my top priority has been to create conditions to support America’s small business and entrepreneur community. Each and every day, the dedicated men and women of SBA are focused on achieving meaningful results on behalf of the small businesses that create the majority of new jobs and drive our economy forward.

“I am proud that Fiscal Year 2015 was one of the most successful years in SBA’s history. It was a record year in small business lending, a record year in investment, and a record year in contracting. SBA reached historic levels for small business lending under our flagship 7(a) program. We reached $23.5 billion dollars in gross approvals, a 22 percent increase in the number of loan approvals, and a 23 percent increase in the dollar value of those loans, compared to FY14.

“It’s not just the overall numbers that were up. We were able to target businesses with the greatest difficulty accessing capital. The dollar value of our 7(a) loans was up 22 percent to women, 23 percent to minorities and 103 percent to veterans. SBA also shattered its record for small business investment under our SBIC program. We grew our portfolio by 10 percent to a record $25 billion. For FY16 we continue to project both the SBIC and 7(a) programs along with the 504 program to operate at a zero taxpayer subsidy.

“While we have made record progress in program areas, there are challenges and areas that need improvement. I agree with many of GAO’s recommendations, which is why we are simultaneously modernizing operations and processes to support the transforming small business economy.

“SBA recently hired a new Chief Digital Officer from the private sector and is recruiting other top IT talent. This team will guide a major upgrade of our IT systems and modernize our infrastructure in order to give SBA’s systems greater capacity, reliability, and security. This modernization complements the agency’s launch of SBAOne, an online origination platform providing lenders with automated access to SBA’s guarantee, and LINC, an online matchmaking tool that has already connected 20,000 small businesses with lenders.

“Like any great agency, it is the skilled workforce that moves it forward. We’re currently crafting a comprehensive workforce plan, which will include both a skills gap assessment and gap closure plan. We hired SBA’s first ever Chief Learning Officer to help existing staff acquire new skills to advance their careers and fill critical agency needs.

“In my 20 months on the job, SBA has played a critical role in supporting our thriving small business community and continuing to build on our record breaking numbers. We will continue to work closely with our community resource partners: SBDCs, SCORE, Women’s Business Centers, and the Veteran’s Business Outreach Centers to continue building our legacy of success stories in all communities across the nation. I appreciate all the support Congress has provided to make the reforms necessary so that SBA can continue to deliver first-rate services to the small businesses we are privileged to serve every day.”

Subject: Wolverine's letter
From: "Patricia White" <pwhite.red@gmail.com>
Date: Thu, January 7, 2016 2:35 am

The following is copied from a facebook post which came out today. Please share it far and wide! I visited him two days ago; extremely weak and bedridden, and at that time he thought it better to wait 2 weeks and give Trudeau a chance to respond - apparently he has changed his mind! Great!

The truth will come out, sooner or later, and now that the kidnapping, rape, murder and torture of residential school children is surfacing, more and more reality is going to hit Canadians in the face who take pride in this country. Our silence makes us all complicit. Canada's holocaust and genocidal history is no better than Hitler's Germany. The continuation of the destruction of Mama Earth and all of Life by the system known as "patriarchy" is only possible because we allow the numbing and brainwashing to continue. "Canadians no longer bend the knee; we were blind but now can see: traitors' work and treachery" GW Langstaff 1973.

This letter by Wolverine is being sent to the Government today. He is calling for a national public inquiry into Gustafsen Lake. Please share his letter to the Government of Canada calling for a public inquiry.

Under Liberal Prime Minister Jean Chr tien, Canada's largest paramilitary operation was carried out on the sacred Sundance lands at Ts'Peten in 1995. Armoured personnel carriers, .50 calibre machine guns, land mines, and an astonishing 77,000 rounds of ammunition were directed at the land defenders. A police note by Chief Superintendent Johnston stated: "There are 6 hardliners in the camp WHO WILL REQUIRE KILLING."

Wolverine is a farmer, a former political prisoner, a warrior, a teacher, a great grandfather. I met him over a decade ago while organizing a conference when i was nineteen years old and he wanted to attend and speak. Since then, he has taught me about the Royal Proclamation, place names in his territory, Secwepemc history and a history of colonialism, stories of warriors and trickster stories since time immemorial. When i was living without full status, he welcomed me to his territory. When i was sick he sent for medicines from the north and the east. When we shut down the airport in a direct action to stop a deportation, he was the first person to call me and joked "Ah, you got them good this time." He is fierce and generous and courageous and loving like few others.

As Wolverine is spending time recovering and healing, he is asking for support from all those touched by him, inspired by him, those who draw courage from him. For twenty years, the Ts'Peten Defenders have been calling for a national public inquiry. From Gustafsen to Kanesatake and Elsipogtog, state violence has been unleashed on Indigenous peoples asserting inherent rights to protect their lands.

As Wolverine said yesterday "We cannot be afraid anymore, the time for this inquiry into Gustafsen Lake has come and to let the people know what happened to us and continues to happen to us."

TEXT OF LETTER

The Right Honourable Justin Trudeau
Office of the Prime Minister
80 Wellington Street
Ottawa, ON K1A 0A2

The Honourable Jody Wilson
House of Commons
Ottawa, ON K1A 0A6

December 30, 2015

Dear Mr. Trudeau,

My name is Wolverine. I am also known as William Jones Ignace. I am an 83-year old father, grandfather and great grandfather, and an Elder of the Secwepemc nation in what is called British Columbia. I am a farmer. This past summer I cultivated 8 acres of organic food to nourish the people in my nation and other nations as well. I am a long time defender of the inherent jurisdiction of Indigenous peoples to steward our traditional homelands.

Today I am writing to you to request that you initiate a federal public inquiry into the events surrounding the month long standoff at Ts'Peten (Gustafsen Lake), British Columbia in 1995, an event which cast a deep shadow on the relationship between the Canadian government and Indigenous nations, which to this day has not been adequately investigated.

In 1995, after a long history of peaceful attempts to have Secwepemc sovereignty respected, Indigenous people from the Secwepemc nation and their supporters took a stand on sacred Sundance lands at Ts'Peten, aka Gustafsen Lake. The incident began after a local white rancher, Lyle James began demanding that the sacred Secwepemc Sundance Camp leave land to which he claimed ownership. Approximately 24 Sundancers set up camp to defend Ts'Peten. I was one of those people.

Beginning in August 1995, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) surrounded the Ts'Peten Defenders. Over the next month police, politicians, and media escalated the situation to make the siege the most expensive and largest domestic military operation in Canada's history: armoured personnel carriers, .50 calibre machine guns, land mines, and an astonishing 77,000 rounds of ammunition were directed at the land defenders. In the course of the standoff, RCMP shot at unarmed people and at people in negotiated no-shoot zones. RCMP Superintendent Murray Johnston expressed the belief that a resolution to the standoff would "require the killing" of the defenders, including myself. Although this thankfully did not come to be, the unjust and violent actions carried out against the Secwepemc people during the siege remains strong in our memories to this day.

Despite the twenty years that have passed since the Ts'Peten standoff, the core issues that so forcefully clashed against each other remain at the forefront of the hearts and minds of Indigenous people. That is our right to self-determination, autonomy and protection from the dispossession of our lands and territories. According to the Royal Proclamation of 1763, Aboriginal Title to land exists inherently and will continue to exist until it has been ceded by treaty with the Crown. The land on which the Ts'Peten standoff occurred was, and remains to this day, uncaded territory. The land at Ts'Peten was never handed over by the Secwepemc Nation to Canadian control through treaty or otherwise, and is therefore land that cannot have been sold to settlers by the Canadian or British Columbian governments. The use of Canadian paramilitary forces against the people of the Secwepemc nation asserting our inherent jurisdiction and title over our own territories therefore is a serious abrogation of the Nation to Nation relationship between the Canadian government and the Secwepemc Nation.

This abrogation has yet to be properly investigated, and remains one of the largest stains on relations between Indigenous nations and the Canadian state. A public federal inquiry is long overdue into the actions of the RCMP, the Canadian government and the provincial government of British Columbia.

In recent months, Mr. Trudeau, you have called for a renewed Nation to Nation relationship with Indigenous nations, promising a new era of recognition, rights, respect, cooperation and partnership, rooted in the principles of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. According to that Declaration, Indigenous peoples have the right to be safe from being forcibly removed from their lands and territories. Even now, aggressive resource extraction and the destruction it inevitably brings regularly occurs on Indigenous lands without the consent of Indigenous peoples. Indigenous lands which, according to the very agreements that founded the nation of Canada, do not belong to Canada to be given away without the free prior and informed consent of the Indigenous people of those lands who never relinquished their rights. In order to build this Nation to Nation relationship, Indigenous peoples must know that they can continue to pursue peaceful processes for protecting their sovereignty, without the threat of state sanctioned violence being used against them. The use of police and RCMP intimidation and force as a method to settle land claims in favour of the Canadian national and provincial governments is antithetical to the creation of a healthy and just partnership between nations. If Indigenous people are prevented from asserting their rights to sovereignty, true reconciliation cannot occur.

The time has come to honour your commitment to Indigenous people, and to a reconciliation between our nations. An inquiry into the Ts'Peten standoff would demonstrate that the Canadian government is truly committed to a new era of respectful, Nation to Nation relationships in which the wrongs of the past are thoroughly understood and acknowledged, ensuring that threats, intimidation, defamation and force are never again used against Indigenous people in Canada.

With respect,
Wolverine, William Jones Ignace
