Oil and Gas Development May Pose New Hazard to Water Quality in Arid Lands

Kate Dougherty, Earth Island Journal: A salty mystery is brewing in Carbon County, Wyoming. The brush-carpeted landscape here is home to ranchers, farmers and the beleaguered sage grouse. It's also home to Muddy Creek, where water salinity spiked suddenly in 2009. Read the Article

The Bureau of Land Management's Inconsistent Approach Toward Rule Breakers

Jonathan Thompson, High Country News: In the context of the Oregon standoff, there are similar cases involving Bureau of Land Management land, but the punishment for whatever transgressions might have occurred varies. Further examination shows how consistent (or not) the agency has been. Read the Article

New Mexico is 1st to issue plans to sue EPA over mine spill

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - New Mexico plans to sue the federal government and the owners of two Colorado mines that were the source of a massive spill last year that contaminated rivers in three Western states, officials said Thursday. The New Mexico Environment Department said it filed a notice of its intention to sue the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency over the spill, becoming the first to do so. The lawsuit also would target the state of Colorado and the owners of the Gold King and Su...

While filming for The Revenant, DiCaprio said he saw how “we’re systemically destroying ... our planet on an unprecedented scale in human history.”

<http://readersupportednews.org/news-section2/318-66/34590-leonardo-dicaprio-revenant-drove-home-need-to-take-climate-action>

Today's selection from Delanceyplace.com -- from The Horse by Wendy Williams. Climate change has varied widely through time. The temperature increase during the Paleocene-Eocene Thermal Maximum (PETM) of 56 million years ago, in which global temperatures rose at least 5°C for 200,000 years, may have helped lead to the rise of mammals:

"[During the PETM] it was hot. ... In fact, it was as though there was a sudden explosion of heat, as remarkable in its own way as the fall of the asteroid had been 10 million years earlier. Curiously, this explosion of heat also marks the appearance of Polecat Bench, [Wyoming's] horses and primates. This was a time when temperatures in some places shot up by 6 or 8 degrees Celsius in a very short time period, lingered at those heights, then, almost as suddenly, dropped back down. The cause of this heat spike remains elusive, but it may have been due to large bursts of methane that bubbled up from the deep ocean.

"On temperature charts that track the rise and fall of heat through-out our planet's history, the heat spike looks to me like the outline of the Eiffel Tower. The anomaly is officially called the Paleocene-Eocene Thermal Maximum, PETM for short, but I prefer to think of it as the Eiffel Tower of Heat, with its sharp lines of ascent and descent that mimic so closely the graceful lines of the Parisian landmark. It's a weird event.

"And it's doubly weird that both horses and primates may owe their existence, in part, to its existence: the spike marks the beginning of the Eocene, when not just horses and primates, but most modern mammal groups finally came into their own. Many of our major mammal groups trace their first appearances to this puzzling heat spike. It's as though the whole world had become a giant petri dish brought to a boil by a colossal Bunsen burner. And voilà! A world that was drowning in post-asteroid misery suddenly experienced a global spring. ...

"It's hard for us to imagine in our twenty-first-century world, where we accept the cruel reality of sweltering summers and freezing winters, but for a good deal of Earth's history, including most of the Eocene, the planet enjoyed fairly uniform temperatures. For example, during the Eocene, the world north of the Arctic Circle was so warm that crocodiles flourished there. There were no ice caps, of course, and so much freshwater flowed into the Arctic Ocean that a layer of freshwater sat like a lens over the salt water. The freshwater Azolla fern was plentiful. Forests of redwoods and walnut trees grew there. Paleontologists have found the remains of giant ants usually associated with the tropics."

National Funding

Support for Art Inspired Community Development Initiatives

ArtPlace America: National Creative Placemaking Fund

ArtPlace America is a collaboration of leading national and regional foundations that is working to position art and culture as a core sector of community planning and development. ArtPlace's National Creative Placemaking Fund invests in planning and development projects throughout the United States and its territories where arts and culture play a central role. The Fund gives some emphasis to applications from selected localities; however, applications are welcome from all rural and urban regions across the country, including the U.S. Territories. Grants will generally range between $50,000 and $500,000. Nonprofit organizations, local governing bodies, individual artists/designers, and for-profit organizations are eligible to apply. (Organizations without 501(c)(3) status or a city charter must apply through a nonprofit fiscal agent.) The registration deadline is February 16, 2016; applications are due March 2, 2016. Visit the ArtPlace website to learn more about the Fund.

Nutrition Projects in Native American Communities Funded

First Nations Development Institute: Seeds of Native Health

First Nations Development Institute (First Nations) is accepting proposals for the Seeds of Native Health grant program under the Native Agriculture and Food Systems initiative. The purpose of this grant program is to support Native tribes and organizations working to eliminate food insecurity, promote access to fresh and healthy foods, and provide increased access to nutritional programs aimed at improving the overall nutrition and health of Native people and communities. Native American-controlled nonprofit organizations, tribes and tribal departments, tribal organizations, and Native American community-based groups are eligible to apply. Up to 12 grant awards ranging from $30,000 to $35,000 will be awarded. The application deadline is February 11, 2016. Visit the First Nations website to learn more about the program and submit an online application.

Grants Enhance Housing for Veterans

Home Depot Foundation: Veteran Housing Grants Program

The Home Depot Foundation's Veteran Housing Grants Program supports nonprofit organizations nationwide that address the development and repair of veterans housing. Grants are provided for single family or multifamily housing, permanent supportive housing, and transitional housing projects. Grants ranging from $100,000 to $500,000 are awarded solely for the physical construction or repair of housing for veterans. Organizations that have previous experience developing, and either currently manage or own veteran-specific housing are eligible to apply. The first two application deadlines in 2016 are February 24 and June 23. Visit the Foundation's website for online application instructions.

Hiking Trail Projects Nationwide Supported

American Hiking Society: National Trails Fund

The National Trails Fund, sponsored by the American Hiking Society (AHS), provides support to grassroots nonprofit organizations throughout the country working toward establishing, protecting, and maintaining foot trails in America. The Fund's grants, ranging from $500 to $5,000, help give local groups the resources they need to secure access, volunteers, tools, and materials to protect America's public trails. Grants will be considered for the following: projects that have hikers as the primary constituency; projects that secure trail lands, including acquisition of trails and trail corridors and the costs associated with acquiring conservation easements; projects that will result in substantial ease of access, improved hiker safety, or avoidance of environmental damage; and projects that promote constituency building surrounding specific trail projects, including volunteer recruitment and support. Applying organizations must be AHS Alliance Members. Online applications are due February 19, 2016. Visit the American Hiking Society website for application guidelines as well as information on becoming an AHS Member.

Regional Funding

Funds for Organizations in West Virginia and SW Pennsylvania

Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation

The Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation provides support to nonprofit organizations throughout the state of West Virginia and in southwestern Pennsylvania (Allegheny, Fayette, Greene, and Washington counties). The Foundation's grant priorities for both geographic areas include the following: education, with a focus on successful learning throughout the educational system, from pre-kindergarten to post-secondary education for adults; and economic development, with emphasis on the promotion of entrepreneurship, technology-based development, and the growth of new capital for businesses in distressed communities and areas of high unemployment. In West Virginia only, the Foundation also provides grants in the areas of health and human services and community development. Applications may be submitted throughout the year. Visit the Foundation's website to review the application guidelines.

Grants Address Teen Suicide Prevention in Alaska

Alaska Community Foundation: Teen Suicide Prevention Program

The Teen Suicide Prevention Program, administered by the Alaska Community Foundation in partnership with the Alaska Children's Trust, supports projects that will directly enhance community-based efforts throughout Alaska to prevent teen suicide. Priority will be given to programs that encourage Alaskans to take responsibility for preventing teen suicide, give Alaskans the tools they need to respond to teens at risk of suicide, and encourage Alaskans to work together on this issue. Funded programs should focus on promoting wellness – physical, mental, and spiritual – in order to prevent teen suicide. Preference will be given to projects that are located in rural Alaska or programs that reach rural communities. Grants ranging up to $5,000 are provided to nonprofit organizations, tribes, schools, churches, and local government agencies. The application deadline is February 15, 2016. Visit the Alaska Community Foundation website to download the grant guidelines and submit an online application.

Support for Capital Projects in Indiana

SIA Foundation

The SIA (Subaru of Indiana Automotive) Foundation supports nonprofit organizations, educational institutions, and government agencies throughout Indiana that work to improve the quality of life and help meet the needs of the residents of the state. The Foundation's funding priorities include arts and culture, education, and health and welfare. Capital grants, which range from $1,000 to $10,000, must be used for investments in facilities, equipment, or real estate. For the first application cycle of 2016, applications will be accepted from January 1 through March 31. Visit the Foundation's website to apply.

Oregon Arts and Cultural Initiatives Funded

Oregon Community Foundation: Creative Heights Project Grants

The Oregon Community Foundation is dedicated to improving life in Oregon and promoting effective philanthropy. The Foundation's Creative Heights Project Grants offer support to provide artists an opportunity to stretch their creative practice, provide unique opportunities for Oregonians to experience innovative arts and culture, and to increase Oregon's cultural visibility and vitality. The focus is on the creation or presentation of new and innovative performances, exhibitions, programs, and other works of art and culture. In the current funding cycle the Foundation will fund up to 20 projects with grants ranging from $10,000 to $100,000 per project. Oregon-based nonprofit organizations are eligible to apply; individual artists and other groups may apply in partnership with a fiscal sponsor. The deadline for letters of inquiry is February 17, 2016. Visit the Foundation's website to download the Creative Heights Project Grants Request for Proposals.
