Opening at the Smithsonian/American Indian Museum:

Ua Mau Ke Ea: The Sovereign Hawaiian Nation    January 17, 2016 – January 2017
Hawai'i was an independent kingdom until 1893, when non-Native businessmen, supported by U.S. diplomats and Marines, overthrew the monarchy and declared themselves the new government. Ua Mau Ke Ea: The Sovereign Hawaiian Nation takes visitors through the history of the Hawaiian Nation, from the consolidation of the islands by King Kamehameha I in 1810 and the establishment of a society based on law, literacy, and diplomacy; through the undermining of Hawai'i's independence and its annexation by the United States; to the rise of the Hawaiian rights movement in the late 1960s and the resurgence of Hawaiian nationalism today. Developed by the museum in close collaboration with Hawaiian scholars, political leaders, and community members, the exhibition uses photographs, documents, music, artifacts, and video, to present Hawai'i's contested past and the possibilities of its future.    Learn more

DISCOVER MORE Glittering World: Navajo Jewelry of the Yazzie Family

November 13, 2014 – January 10, 2016

Jewelry making has long been an important part of the lives of Southwest Native peoples. During the last 50 years, Native jewelers in the Southwest—Navajos in particular—have created a contemporary aesthetic that draws on traditional materials and reflects the persistence of cultural values such as beauty, centering, and balance.

Glittering World presents the story of Navajo jewelry through the lens of the gifted Yazzie family of Gallup, New Mexico—one of the most celebrated jewelry making families of our time. The silver, gold, and stone inlay work of Lee Yazzie and his younger brother, Raymond, has won every major award in the field. Their sister Mary Marie makes outstanding jewelry that combines fine bead- and stonework; silver beads are handmade by other sisters.

Glittering World—featuring almost 300 examples of contemporary jewelry made by several members of the Yazzie family—shows how the family’s art flows from their Southwest environs and strong connection to their Navajo culture. With historic pieces from the museum’s collections, the exhibition places Navajo jewelry making within its historical context of art and commerce, illustrates its development as a form of cultural expression, and explores the meanings behind its symbolism.

Forest Service and Ski Areas

The U.S. Forest Service will not require ski resorts to transfer water rights to the federal government, as it had proposed in 2012, according to a rule finalized on December 30. States and ski operators argued that the original proposal was tantamount to a taking of property and an unacceptable business risk. The Forest Service will now require ski resorts to show that they have sufficient water available for snowmaking and other resort operations, when they apply for a permit to use public land.

-Anne Susan

My beautiful and loving Mom, Lucille Harvey Willie peacefully passed at 1:02 AM today. (1.5.15) I thank you family and friends for your prayers. I was blessed with an amazing, hardworking woman as my Mom who grew up in poverty, lost her own Mom when she was young yet through her determination, completed her nursing education giving back to American Indian patients in Nevada and Arizona for 47 years. She was strict and disciplined, but she also was fun, full of laughter and pushed me to get my education. She is at peace and a lady always knows when it's time to leave...she is with Dad and baby sister Denise....that is comforting to me as I think back to all my precious moments of Momma.
