The True Story Of How Standing Rock Fell

*At the end of a protest that lasted for nearly a year, one veteran traveled to Standing Rock to find answers.

"DAPL wanted TigerSwan contractors to become more aggressive in their duties after becoming fed up with their equipment being vandalized. In our phone interview, he said, "They eventually ended up handing out baseball bats and axe handles for an intimidation factor, and they intended for people to use them."

"Both items are commonly considered deadly force, and rightly made law enforcement uncomfortable. The fact that DAPL, a private company, insinuated that they wanted

Subject: Stand with Standing Rock this Friday

The Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, along with allies at Indigenous Environmental Network and the Native Organizers Alliance, has organizing a Native action to continue to build the Standing Rock movement at a time of the most difficult challenges to the legal and moral right to tribal sovereignty and to climate justice ever faced. Tipis are up in our nation's capital right now, and they're doing a round dance at the EPA tonight.

The call is out for all allies of Standing Rock to join this Indigenous Rising.

Washington, DC: Native Nations Rise

CONGRESSMAN TOM McCLINTOCK (R) CA

"I remember one night in Schwarzenegger's office at 2:00 in the morning negotiating, and everybody was preoccupied with the next election, and what that would mean for this water policy, and a bond we were considering. It was all about the next election and the politics of that. In my great frustration I said, "Don't you all get it? This is not about the next election. It is not about you. It's about your grandchildren." As I looked around the room at the folks and saw the blank looks, I was totally disheartened. None of them got it – not even the governor – that it was about the future. " STATE SENATOR JIM NIELSEN, Republican representing the 4th Senate district of California (Sacramento Valley)
