"That's why it was so critical for the notice regarding the Dakota Access Pipeline to be published before Friday. The wealthy backers of the project in fact tried delay the document in anticipation of a regulatory freeze but a federal judge refused to go along with the last-minute request.

Now that the environmental impact statement has officially been announced, it would be difficult, though not impossible, for the Trump administration to pull it back without prompting more litigation or drawing a public backlash.

New Tar Sands Pipelines Are Incompatible With Paris Climate Goals

Ecowatch.com 1.20.17

New research released Thursday reveals disturbing new evidence on how locking-into new long-lived tar sands production undermines global efforts to address the global climate crisis far beyond Canada's borders.

"Trudeau's pipeline decisions will lead directly to suffering, displacement and even death for vulnerable people around the world due to impacts of a warming world," said Saleemul Huq, senior fellow of the International Institute for Environment and Development in Bangladesh. "People who have contributed least to this global crisis will pay the highest price for Canada's efforts to dig up and export more oil in the midst of a global crisis."

The analysis from Oil Change International finds that Canada will be the world's second highest contributor of new oil production globally over the next 20 years if action isn't taken to halt new tar sands pipelines and production growth. Once extracted, much of this oil will be burned, pushing global temperature limits over the brink.

Pom Pom Pomogo = Frogs leap frogging Now Three Brothers based on the killing of one of Tenaya's sons.

Dee Numa Our Indian scouts (Pohoochane Miwoks)were sent up to hunt out the hidden warriors, and through the means of fair promises, if they came down voluntarily, Captain Boling succeeded in bringing in the five Indians. Three of the captives were known to us, being sons of Ten-ie-ya, (Mono Lake Paiute) one of whom was afterwards killed; the other two were young braves, the wife of one being a daughter of the old chief. The Indian name for the three rocky peaks near which this capture was made was not then known to any of our battalion, but from the strange coincidence of three brothers being made prisoners so near them, we designated the peaks as the “Three Brothers.” I soon learned that they were called by the Indians “Kom-po-pai-zes,” from a fancied resemblance of the peaks to the heads of frogs when sitting up ready to leap. A fanciful interpretation has been given the Indian name as meaning “mountains playing leap-frog,” but a literal translation is not desirable
