Treaty of Ruby Valley

As Nevada enters its sesquicentennial celebration, there is another event that happened 150 years ago that really deserves no celebration, but it should be remembered: The Treaty of Ruby Valley. The story of Native Americans often can be an unhappy one. American history is full of examples of their... knpr.org

“Now I never know, from one minute to the next, when I turn on a faucet or hydrant, whether there will be water or not. The aquifer is being depleted.” –Lois Scott, a resident of Cope, Colorado, in reference to the drying up of the High Plains Aquifer. Agricultural over-pumping has led to a severe groundwater depletion throughout Colorado’s Eastern Plains. At this time, there is no agreement in place to slow irrigation and try to save the aquifer. Denver Post

ASU NALSA at Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law

Our NALSA President, Rani Williams, has been voted NALSA Member of the Month by our general membership. Here’s a little bit about Rani in her own words:

I am Agai Dicutta Numu of the Walker River Paiute Tribe and grew up on the Walker River Paiute Reservation in Schurz, Nevada. I received a dual degree in Mass Communications and American Indian Studies at the University of Washington-Seattle. Before law school, I worked as a paralegal for a small Indian law and natural resources firm in Seattle. Before joining ASU Law ILP, I was a member of the PLSI 2015 cohort in Albuquerque, New Mexico where I met amazing Indian law students and professors. My 1L summer, I worked for the same Seattle firm that allowed me to explore my interest in law and also conducted research on economic development opportunities for northern Nevada tribes. My 2L summer, I received the opportunity to be a Legal Fellow for Nevada U.S. Senator Catherine Cortez Masto in Washington, D.C. While on the Hill, I was able to work on her Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and natural resources portfolios.

I am truly grateful for each and every individual who has supported me along my journey. I truly would not be where I am today without my family, mentors, professors, friends, and colleagues. Pesha Uh! (Thank you!) for this recognition! :)

Carolyn Harry Its been a year since that horrific day last year when a driver intentionally ran through the crowd downtown Reno. Its been a year of clearly "No Justice, No Peace", a year of watching our Kitty Colbert recover.. A year of living with fabricated lies from our Reno PD, ..if it had not happened to us, ..I most likely would not have believed it either... Above all however, its been a year of unity and strength among family, friends, so many allies, who stood for justice and continue to fight the good fights. Gains were made and as Indigenous People, we were not defeated. A year later, thank you all from every fiber of my being for being there to support Kitty, her grandchildren and all who were there. Thank you for being there for my

Sam....thank you Carlos Calica for the cleansing ceremony, for Dean Barlese, for all you did and do..to my Ogle Luta Family for the prayers...it was a difficult time for my family, but we got what we prayed for and for that, we are thankful. It was a much more difficult year for Kitty Colbert, our light and inspiration. Continue the prayers for her...Pesha u..mu no'o soopetu. I loved the support shown through this picture drawn by Brandy Shaw

California Tribe Wants to Bring Their Salmon Home From New Zealand River

Marc Dadigan, YES! Magazine With dark late September clouds roiling above, about 20 Winnemem Wintu tribe members paddled dugout cedar canoes through stiff winds and three-foot crests on the Shasta reservoir in far northern California.
