On behalf of the AT&T Center

for Indigenous Politics and Policy (CIPP), I am writing to ask you to encourage college and graduate students who are interested in policy to apply for the Native American Political Leadership Program (NAPLP) for Spring 2018.

NAPLP is a full scholarship program for American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian undergraduate and graduate students to study applied American politics at the George Washington University in Washington DC. As part of the Semester in Washington Politics program, NAPLP is funded by a generous gift from AT&T. The scholarship covers up to nine credits in tuition, on-campus housing, round-trip air travel, and a stipend for books and living expenses ($2,400 in two installments). Students also have the opportunity to have an internship in places such as a congressional office, national tribal organization or a federal agency and to develop lasting connections with a cohort of Native American students from across the country.

CIPP is the George Washington University-based center whose purpose is to research, educate, and promote public awareness on issues of significance to Indigenous communities. In the GW spirit of scholarship and service, we hope that students who participate in NAPLP return to their schools and communities with fresh perspectives, knowledge, and skills about the political process and community organizing and that they feel better prepared to give back to and take a leadership role in their communities.

Students may apply online at www.naplp.gwu.edu. Applications are due November 1, 2017.

Please contact the NAPLP office at 202-994-3284 or at naplp@gwu.edu with any questions you may have.

My best wishes and many thanks,

Wendy L. Helgemo, Director and Associate Professor, AT&T Center for Indigenous Politics and Policy, The George Washington University Washington, DC (202) 994-0247

Dear Advocates,

While the Standing Rock and Cheyenne River Sioux Tribes fight the Dakota Access Pipeline in the federal court system, individual protestors from the Standing Rock protests are fighting their own battles in court. For us, as a nation, these water protector cases pose a question of freedom of speech and right to peaceful protest. For the individuals fighting these cases, it is a matter of life and livelihood.

That is why I wanted to introduce you to the Water Protector Legal Collective. They are doing great work for the women and men who took part in the protests and personally took a stand against the Dakota Access Pipeline. If you believe that these peaceful protestors and water protectors deserve experienced, effective criminal defense lawyers, please take a moment to read below about the Legal Collective and how they are helping those who put themselves on the front line to protect our water and life.

As always – thank you for all that you do.

John Echohawk, Executive Director, Native American Rights Fund

The Water Protector Legal Collective (<https://waterprotectorlegal.org/>) is the on-the-ground legal support for the Dakota Access Pipeline resistance at Standing Rock. We are 100% committed to making sure every Water Protector arrested in these peaceful protests have the best legal defense possible. Our working model is to Leave No Woman or Man Behind!

There were 831 cases in ND state courts and 7 cases in federal court. We have also filed one class action case and are developing up to six civil cases. Since the state arrests have been prosecuted in 2017 we have been very successful at showing the unfairness of the arrests and the peaceful nature of the protest. To date, more than 400 cases have been closed or dismissed with only 10 convictions.

|---------------------------------------|-------------|-----|
| Closed or Dismissed Cases (403 total) | Dismissed   | 289 |
| Pleas or pre-trial diversions 105     | Convictions | 10  |

A key part of our success is bringing in experienced, effective criminal defense lawyers from out of state. The bias in North Dakota against these peaceful protesters is immense. Our attorneys force the state to prove their case and challenge local court-appointed defense attorneys to fight for their clients.

The state, however, is pushing back. On September 11, judges hearing the cases petitioned the ND Supreme Court to restrict our use of out-of-state attorneys. The ND Supreme Court will decide in a few weeks.

We need your help to continue this important work. Please contribute to Water Protector Legal Collective at <https://waterprotectorlegal.org/>. Thank you for your support.

The Energy East Pipeline Is Dead, but Three Tar Sands Pipeline Projects Remain By Ron Johnson

Relocation Recruitment Poster

Last week, energy company TransCanada pulled the plug on its 2,800-mile Energy East Pipeline and Eastern Mainline projects, which would have shipped 1.1 million barrels of crude oil from the Athabasca tar sands to refineries in eastern Canada. The move was celebrated as a victory by environmentalists and Indigenous people pushing for a transition from fossil fuels to renewable energy.

"This is a tremendous battle victory in the greater fight to keep fossil fuels in the ground and for climate justice for Indigenous nations," Dallas Goldtooth, an organizer with the Indigenous Environmental Network's Keep It In The Ground project, said in a statement. Keep reading...

Jacqueline Keeler, YES! Magazine: In her first full-length documentary, filmmaker Keri Pickett spotlights the fight that her longtime friend Winona LaDuke leads against the proposed Enbridge Sandpiper pipeline that threatens the lakes of wild rice that provide material and spiritual sustenance for her people on the White Earth Reservation. Before Standing Rock, several pipeline fights like this one, led by tribal leaders, got little public notice or coverage in the media.

When the public sector divests itself of physical space en masse, the ability for it to regain control is substantially decreased. If an upswing in municipal finances occurs in the future, the enormous amounts of money it takes to purchase and develop real estate (especially in New York) for public use makes rolling back any sell-offs nearly impossible. Additionally, harming the quality of research libraries in New York has a substantial impact on the regional economy since researchers from all over the world come here to access them.

On a more personal note, the New York Public Library has been indispensable for my research (including research I've done for this site). Public libraries are essentially the only organization that provide access to journals (both digital and physical) for those without an academic affiliation. Even for those with Academic affiliations, they have a fantastic collection of books and will even digitize selected pages and send them to you at no cost. Destroying public libraries and schools is not only a great boon to the FIRE sector, it also greatly harms are ability to resist and articulately criticize dominant narratives and conventional wisdom. As Orwell famously wrote in 1984: “Who controls the past controls the future: who controls the present controls the past”.
