

Journal #4033 - Thanksgiving Day

We are all blessed, no matter the challenges.

And today you will be blessed with having some extra time because you will not be reading much here.

I am thankful for each one of you and the endeavors you undertake; hoping this missive is helpful along the way.

The Turkeys Not on Your Plate: They're Out Back, Climbing the Roof

By KIRK JOHNSON

The population of wild turkeys has soared, and that has brought turkey-human clashes to rooftops, windows, and intersections across the country.

The Wild Turkey May Be America's Greatest Wildlife Conservation Success Story

Eric Holst, Environmental Defense Fund

Holst writes: "How did the turkey bounce back? The answer lies in what some consider America's greatest wildlife conservation success story."

The Feminist Indigenous Candidate Running for President of Mexico

Laura Castellanos and Julie Schwietert Collazo, Vice

Excerpt: "María Marichuy - a native Nahuatl woman born in Tuxpan, in the western state of Jalisco - has been clear about her feminist politics. That stance was also on display throughout her various campaign actions in the marginalized southeast region of Mexico, where especially profound gender inequalities exist thanks to a persistent cultural tradition of men dominating decision-making at every level."
