National Funding

Support for Financial Education and Empowerment Programs

Investopedia

The mission of Investopedia, a financial education website, is to educate people to make smarter financial decisions. Investopedia.org, an initiative of Investopedia, supports programs that enhance financial empowerment among low-income individuals and communities.

Investopedia.org defines “financial empowerment” as providing the information, tools, and coaching needed to achieve financial sustainability in the short- and long-term. One-year grants in the range of $10,000 to $25,000 are being offered to nonprofit organizations that are working to help low-income individuals and communities reduce bad debt, make the most of their financial resources, and build assets. Eligible applicants include 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations based in the United States. The application deadline is January 31, 2018. Visit the Investopedia website to review the funding guidelines and submit an online application.

Conflict Resolution Initiatives for Youth Funded

JAMS Foundation/ACR Initiative for Students and Youth

The JAMS Foundation/ACR Initiative for Students and Youth provides grants for conflict prevention and dispute resolution programs for K-12 students and for adults working with youth populations in ways that directly transfer Conflict Resolution Education (CRE) skills from adults to youth. The emphasis for 2018 is on programs that advance the development, implementation, or assessment of conflict prevention and resolution strategies to serve youth in families whose integrity is jeopardized by changes in social environment that can lead to gang involvement. The possible contexts for projects include community organizations, alternative education, online education, charter schools, after-school programs, juvenile justice facilities, etc. (Traditional K-12 schools may be considered; however, they are not a priority.) Initial project idea descriptions must be submitted by February 14, 2018; invited full proposals will be due June 26, 2018. Visit the ACR website to download the application information.

Grants Strengthen Equity, Justice, and Human Rights

Arca Foundation

The Arca Foundation is dedicated to advancing equity, justice, and human rights. The Foundation believes that the pursuit of economic and racial justice, an inclusive democracy, human rights, and a clean environment requires an engaged citizenry that has access to information and free expression. In the Domestic focus area, the Foundation supports nonprofit organizations working to advance greater economic and racial equity, specifically by addressing the impacts of financialization on an inclusive economy, democracy, and the environment. (The Foundation’s work is national; in order to receive funding, local and state-based efforts must be part of a national campaign or project.) In the International focus area, the Foundation supports nonprofit organizations that advance a more just U.S. foreign policy that prioritizes human rights and peace and security over militarization. The upcoming application deadline is February 1, 2018; application links will be posted in early January 2018. Visit the Foundation's website for more information on the Foundation's grant guidelines.

Programs Promoting Education and Equity for Women and Girls Supported American Association of University Women: Community Action Grants

The American Association of University Women (AAUW) works to advance educational and professional opportunities for women in the United States. The AAUW Community Action Grants program provides funds to individuals, AAUW organizations, and local community-based nonprofit organizations (including universities) throughout the country for innovative programs that promote education and equality for women and girls. Special consideration is given to projects focused on K-14 women and girls' achievements in science, technology, or math. One-year grants of $2,000 to $7,000 provide funds for community-based projects. Two-year grants of $5,000 to $10,000 provide start-up funds for new projects that address the particular needs of the community and develop girls' sense of efficacy through leadership or advocacy opportunities. The application deadline for both types of grants is January 15, 2018. Visit the AAUW website to submit an online application.

Regional Funding

Funds to Address Immigrant and Refugee Concerns in Oregon
Oregon Immigrant and Refugee Funders Collaborative

The purpose of the Oregon Immigrant and Refugee Funders Collaborative, a joint initiative of the Collins Foundation, MRG Foundation, Meyer Memorial Trust, and the Oregon Community Foundation, is to create a coordinated funding approach to address urgent and emerging issues impacting immigrants and refugees in Oregon, and to support local organizations responding to federal policy changes. Grants support projects that provide legal information, services, and representation for immigrants and refugees; outreach and education about policies, programs, services, and preparedness; information gathering, research, and analysis on immigration and refugee issues; basic human needs for immigrants and refugees; and/or community organizing, civic engagement, and advocacy. Most awards through the Collaborative are under $50,000 and decisions are generally made within four weeks; small requests of up to $4,000 with a one-week turnaround are also considered. Visit any of the participating funders' websites to learn more about the Collaborative and to download the application form.

Grants Increase Healthcare Access for Massachusetts Residents
Massachusetts Medical Society and Alliance Charitable Foundation

The Massachusetts Medical Society and Alliance Charitable Foundation is dedicated to addressing issues that affect the health, benefit, and welfare of communities throughout Massachusetts. The Foundation's Care for the Medically Uninsured/Underinsured theme supports physician-led volunteer initiatives to provide free care to uninsured patients and increased access to care for the medically underserved. The Community Action theme funds nonprofit organizations that provide direct care services or that target public health issues which impact the healthcare system and the health and well-being of the community. Requests for new projects are preferred over repeat requests. (A repeat application for funding should specifically document how the new project differs, if it does, from past requests.) Multi-year grants are possible for start-up programs. Letters of intent must be submitted by January 15, 2018. Selected organizations will be invited to submit full proposals, which will be due March 1, 2018. Visit the Foundation's website to review the application guidelines and forms.

Support for Social Justice Initiatives in Alaska

Alaska Community Foundation: Social Justice Fund

The Alaska Community Foundation works to connect people, organizations, and causes to strengthen Alaska's communities. The goal for the Foundation's Social Justice Fund is to support strategic collaborations that prioritize leadership development and allow Alaskans to address the root causes of challenging social justice issues within their communities and across the state. Nonprofit organizations, tribes, schools, faith-based organizations, local government agencies, programs, and grassroots organizations may apply for programmatic and general operating support. Grants will range from $5,000 to $15,000. (The Foundation also offers the Alaska Native Social Justice Fund, which will support Alaska Native-led organizations and communities in using their own voices to address the most important social justice issues within their communities. Grants for this program will range from $5,000 to $20,000.) The letter of intent deadline for both grant programs is January 5, 2018. Visit the Alaska Community Foundation website for more information.

Programs Strengthening Maine Communities Funded

Elmina B. Sewall Foundation

The Elmina B. Sewall Foundation supports work in Maine to improve the well-being of people, animals, and the environment while fostering relationships that strive for social equity and community resilience. The Foundation's Healthy People Healthy Places program is making revisions to its Integration of Environment and Human Well-being Grants category in 2018. For the coming year, this program will provide support to organizations using a deliberate, unified approach to enhancing well-being, prosperity and resiliency of people, communities, and nature. The application deadline is January 16, 2018. The Foundation's Animal Welfare program focuses on organizational capacity building and reducing the unwanted cat population. The next application deadline for this program is June 15, 2018. Visit the Foundation's website to learn more about the available grant programs and the application process.

Federal Funding

Veteran Businesses Supported

Small Business Administration

The Veterans Business Outreach Center Program offers support to provide quality training and counseling to veteran small business owners and entrepreneurs. The application deadline is January 8, 2018.

Program Funds Humanities in the Media

National Endowment for the Humanities

The Media Projects program supports film, television, and radio projects that engage public audiences with humanities ideas in creative and appealing ways. Development and production grants are available. The application deadline is January 10, 2018.

CoSA Announces Two New Publications

We are pleased to announce the following new publications:

To accompany the A National Risk report, we have developed a one-page infographic highlighting key statistics relating to the growth of electronic records in state and territory archives and to SERI's impact on the capacity of staff to manage and preserve them. The infographic is a useful tool for awareness building. Download the report, executive summary, and the infographic at the CoSA website.

A new white paper, Attracting and Retaining Great Talent: Government Records Archives and Records Management as a Career, was developed by CoSA's Education and Training Committee with input from CoSA board members and educators. The report discusses the challenges state government archives and records managers face in attracting and retaining staff, offers insights about the skills and attributes critical to the success of 21st century archivists, and outlines an agenda for change.

Federal Water Tap

21: Superfund sites prioritized for cleanup. Included on the list are the Kalamazoo River (Michigan), Bonita Peak mining district (southwest Colorado), a smelter and lead refinery (East Chicago, Indiana), Tar Creek (Oklahoma), San Jacinto waste pits (Houston, Texas), a former phosphate fertilizer plant (Mississippi), and the Portland, Oregon, harbor. (U.S. Environmental Protection Agency)

Sen. John Thune (R-SD) introduced a bill to reauthorize the National Integrated Drought Information System, a research and communications program that shares water, climate, and soil data and prepares forecasts that are used by state and local agencies. NIDIS tailors its products to regional needs: wetlands in the Carolinas, mountain snowpack and fire hazards in California, salmon and hydropower in the Pacific Northwest, ranching and farming in the northern Plains.

Two Hydropower Bills Move Ahead in the House

The House Energy and Commerce Committee approved a pair of bills that encourage hydropower development.

The Promoting Closed-loop Pumped Storage Hydropower Act, introduced by Rep. Morgan Griffith (R-VA), does exactly what its name suggests: it exempts the twinned energy storage systems, which move water from a lower reservoir to a higher reservoir when electricity is cheap or abundant, from several permitting requirements under the Federal Power Act. Those requirements relate to watershed planning.

The Promoting Hydropower Development at Existing Nonpowered Dams Act, introduced by Rep. Larry Bucshon (R-IN), is also straightforward. It allows regulators to exempt from some licensing requirements the addition of turbines to dams without them.

In context: U.S. Hydropower Grows By Going Small

Guilty Pleas and Sentencing in Oilfield Waste Disposal Case

Two men who had pleaded guilty to violating the Safe Drinking Water Act by improperly disposing of oilfield wastewater in North Dakota were sentenced to three years of supervised release. One of the men will also pay a $50,000 fine and spend up to one year in a halfway house.

The men operated an injection well that did not have a state permit.

Groundwater Quality in Large, Regional Aquifers

The U.S. Geological Survey published four more water quality assessments in its study of regional aquifers.

The assessments are for the Rio Grande aquifer system, the glacial aquifer system in the northern United States, the Cambrian-Ordovician aquifer system in the states of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, and the Piedmont and Blue Ridge crystalline-rock aquifers, which stretch from eastern Alabama to Pennsylvania.

Nitrate was the most common manmade, inorganic contaminant, but it exceeded human health standards in only two percent of samples from the four aquifers. Samples were taken from 60 public water supply wells in three regions, and 90 wells in the glacial aquifer system.

Nutrient Discharge from Wastewater Facilities

USGS researchers used three EPA data sets to produce multi-decade estimates of phosphorus and nitrogen discharges from wastewater treatment plants.

After the Eruption

The eruption, in 1980, of Mt. St. Helens continues to shape the landscape of Washington state. Sediment that is washed from the volcano's scoured northern slopes flows into the Toutle River watershed. A new National Academy of Sciences report outlines ways for local, state, federal, and tribal agencies to manage an engineered system that is ready for an overhaul. A drainage tunnel to keep Spirit Lake from overtopping needs repairs and a basin built to hold back sediment is nearly full.

"Engineering measures now in place, however, do not represent long-term solutions to the region's risk management challenges," which are chronic and catastrophic flooding, the report states.

In context: A Debris-dammed Lake Threatens A Flood

Drought Watch

With a massive high-pressure ridge routing Pacific storms around the American West, it's time to restart the drought watch. Snowpack in the Sierra Nevada and Oregon Cascades is largely below average. The upper Colorado and Rio Grande watersheds are also low. In Arizona, snowpack is almost non-existent.

The U.S. Drought Monitor, meanwhile, shows increased drying across most of the southern half of the United States.

I took this picture as a pre-teen of my great-grandma, isn't she beautiful? She was taking a break after cleaning her garden. She was in her 90's. She had the sweetest high pitched voice and she only spoke Apache. My great-grandma was Annie Alchesay later Harvey then Keys. She was the sister to Chief William Alchesay of the White Mountain Apache Tribe. She married my great-grandpa Poncho Harvey and had one daughter and several sons, including my grandpa Newton Harvey. She told lots of stories and I was amazed hearing her stories about the old days especially when she talked about Geronimo coming to the family camps. I loved hearing her sing her favorite Apache songs. I am honored to know that I was named after her. #ProudGreatGranddaughter

MAGGIE "TABUCE" HOWARD

Born in 1870, near Bridgeport, California, a Piute. Her father was Joaquin Sam, or Kosana. Maggie lived near Bridgeport until her mother died, then went to live with her father near Mono Lake. Her family made many trips over the mountains to Yosemite to gather acorns, and trade with the Yosemite.

At Mono Lake they collected the pupa of a certain fly which breeds on the shores of Mono Lake. With this Ka-cha-vee and acorns they lived well.

On one trip crossing the mountains her father's horse was frightened, and threw him on a rock. Some Indians picked him up and brought him to Yosemite Valley. They thought he was dead. The story of "Kosana" as it was told, is that late in the fall of 1875, a small group of Indians from the Mono Lake Country had crossed the Sierra, to gather acorns. When they had finished, they started their return trip over the high pass, but were forced to turn back because of a heavy snow storm. Among this group was an old man named Kosana, a medicine man, more than 80 years old, and not strong. He died after the exposure and the strenuous trip into the Valley. His followers set up camp near the site of the present park museum where they built their u-ma-cha, with canvas and long slabs of incense cedar bark.

Some white men made a fine coffin for the deceased Kosana, he was buried just south of the large rock that is seen near the southeast corner of the Yosemite Museum.

Kosana had a young daughter at the time of his death, who was none other than "Ta-bu-ce" or Maggie, as she was known by her many friends in later years. Ta-bu-ce is an Indian name meaning "grass nut" the name her mother gave her.

Maggie had three husbands: first was Jack Lundy, second Billy Williams, and third Dan Howard. She had two sons: Willie Mike Williams, and Simon Slim Lundy.

After Maggie was married, she and her oldest son William, her sister's daughter May Tom, age 14, and some others went up the Yosemite Falls trail, and camped somewhere in the upper Indian Canyon. This was after an Indian Festival. Maggie, after much dancing, was tired and went to sleep early. A high wind storm came up and blew down a large pine tree. Her niece May Tom was killed by this fallen tree. Maggie had her collar bone broken, her ankles and feet badly injured, and the bones in her right leg fractured. Her sister took her daughter to the Valley, and left Maggie for dead beneath the tree all night. The next day Charlie Dick and other Indians came for her. She doesn't remember what happened during that long night. A doctor in the Valley set the bones. All summer she lay in a cast, barely able to move her right hand to shoo away the flies. In the fall she was able to walk a little. She never fully recovered from this, always walking with a decided limp.

Maggie lived many years in Yosemite Valley, and was well known by many park visitors; for some years she was employed by the park museum to give demonstrations, making acorn meal and mush. She made many "Hikis," baskets, and sold them to visitors.

Death came to her January 25, 1947, and she was buried at Bishop, California, Too much snow at Mono Lake prevented the burial there, her preferred resting place. (Dee Numa)
