Ed note: While I am starting with California, this sort of information is available for each state.....use the URL but leave off state. Do remember that Indian Agencies were often changed so you need to know the history of the one you are researching so that you can determine to which federal repository records went. Please also remember that Record Group 75 (BIA) is only one for many record groups that contain tribal archives. If you have more questions, do not hesitate to call. sdc

BIA Records: California Navigating Record Group 75 Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) Records

This guide is arranged geographically by state and thereunder contains a listing of tribes and bands living within that state's borders. Under each entry for a tribe or band is a list of the BIA offices which had a jurisdictional relationship with that tribe, and for which the National Archives holds records. The NARA facility which has records for that office is listed in parentheses next to the entry. We have provided direct links into the National Archives Catalog whenever possible for each of these agencies, office, and/or superintendencies. For each, the National Archives Catalog has tallied the number of descriptions and series available. Note, the National Archives Catalog may include multiple derivations of the agencies, offices, and superintendies name.

It has been impossible to include the name of every subagency and special agency. The most significant omissions are the agencies and subagencies established during the early years of a superintendency, when agents were moved about without permanent assignments to a particular tribe or locality.
