Robots Are Waiting For You At The Nevada Center For Applied Research

Robots navigate obstacle courses and autonomous vehicles learn how to drive at the Nevada Center for Applied Research at the University of Nevada, Reno. And, that's what's happening in only one room of the three-story building. On the other floors, startups and other companies can access the physical and intellectual assets of the university to do groundbreaking research and create life-saving innovations.

Located in the Applied Research Facility on UNR's campus, the Nevada Center for Applied Research is a best-in-class, stand-alone, fully-functional applied research and development technology center. At NCAR, entrepreneurs or other businesses can work with laboratories, testing centers, equipment and expertise that might otherwise be too expensive or difficult to access. The center helps industry, startup companies, researchers and entrepreneurs access the broad range of technical services, intellectual capital, testing and research capabilities, advanced tools and methodologies at UNR.

NCAR focuses on three main areas of development, including robotics, life sciences, and advanced manufacturing. It offers a variety of laboratories and testing facilities, such as an autonomous robots arena, share wet lab incubation space for biotech startups, and a user-centered, open-innovation living lab ecosystem for autonomous and connected vehicles in Northern Nevada. Experience this innovative facility for yourself at Tech Wednesday on Oct. 10.

DOE Selects 15 Tribal Energy Infrastructure Deployment Projects

The U.S. Dept. of Energy (DOE) announced nearly $9 million in funding for 15 tribal energy infrastructure projects. This funding through the Office of Indian Energy Policy and Programs will help Native American and Alaska Native communities harness their vast undeveloped energy resources to reduce or stabilize energy costs, as well as increase energy security and resilience. These energy projects, valued at nearly $25 million, are the result of a competitive funding opportunity announcement \(FOA\) announced Feb. 16, 2018.

Stereotype Proved incorrect: Natives drink LESS than European Americans

Posted By Corinne Oestreich September 25th, 2018 Blog

There has been a perpetuated stereotype that Native Americans drink alcohol more than European Americans. This stereotype dates back to the introduction of colonialism in North America.

A study conducted by The University of Arizona's Family and Community Medicine dept, as well as the Native American Research and Training Center, found that Natives had LOWER comparable rates to that of European Americans.

Study can be found here. Check out the rest of the shared article with Rawstory.

Trump Repeals Rule Meant to Prevent Oil-Carrying 'Bomb Trains' From Derailing and Exploding

In a move that outraged environmentalists and increased the chances of deadly and destructive accidents, the Trump administration's Department of Transportation (DOT) has repealed an Obama-era rule that mandated safety upgrades for "dangerous" oil tanker trains to reduce the possibility of derailments, explosions and spills.

"This commonsense rule was put in place in response to a series of deadly accidents, and this shameless decision to repeal it will mean more workers and communities are put at risk," declared Sierra Club Beyond Dirty Fuels campaign director Kelly Martin.

The rule required trains carrying oil and other flammable materials—sometimes called "bomb trains"—to install electronically controlled pneumatic (ECP) brakes that decrease the likelihood of derailment by 2021.

While it was initially criticized by green groups that said it did not go far enough to protect communities, the Monday reversal was regarded as yet another move by the administration to appease polluters at the expense of the public.

"Apparently there's no limit to the lengths the Trump administration will go," Martin said, "to prioritize the desires of polluting industries over the health and safety of the American people."

The repeal was initially proposed in December of 2017, but finalized by the DOT's Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA) on Monday. PHMSA claimed that a congressionally-mandated analysis concluded "that the expected costs of requiring ECP brakes would be significantly higher than the expected benefits of the requirement." The change does not prevent railroads from using ECP brakes but the safety upgrade is no longer mandated.

"The electronically controlled brakes would have been a long-awaited safety improvement," Fred Millar, an independent consultant specializing in chemical safety and transport, told BuzzFeed News.

By repealing the safety requirement, Millar added, "the cost will be borne by the people who die or are injured or who have terrible property damage."

"About 20 derailments of trains carrying oil and ethanol that have led to spills, fires, and, in some cases, evacuations have occurred since 2010 in the U.S. and Canada," according to Fortune.

Perhaps of the most high-profile derailment in recent years occurred in Quebec in 2013. A train carrying crude oil derailed and exploded, destroying the small downtown of Lac-Mégantic and killing 47 people. Five years after the tragedy, CBC reported in July, rail safety advocates say the Canadian government also has not done enough to prevent future disasters.
