Dancing As the Spirit of a Wild Grizzly Bear

January 9, 2016 ·

We offered prayer at The Last Hole along Antelope Creek tonight. This site got its name because, after days of running, 21 Cheyenne (mostly kids) hid here. US soldiers approached from three directions and there was nowhere for them to run so they piled on one another, placing the youngest children closest to the ground in attempts to protect them. The soldiers could've approached, recaptured them, and taken them back to the fort but they didn't. All of those who hid here were summarily executed, shot at point-blank range. There were kids as young as 8, 5 and 2yrs old.

Dirt was carelessly thrown over their bodies. Days later they were dug up and eventually taken to the Smithsonian in Washington DC so their remains could be studied to see how well the Army's guns worked on bones and skulls at close range.

After the Native American Graves and Repatriation Act was passed in 1990, Cheyenne leadership fought to bring them home. They returned in 1993. Our Run ends at their gravesite in Busby, MT. The rancher who now owns this land, Andy Federle, reported hearing children's screams and cries across this land at night. Years and years ago, Phillip Whiteman Jr and Lee Lonebear visited the rancher and asked to visit the site to offer prayer.

This working relationship allows for the Runners to visit The Last Hole every year to offer prayers to those spirits. Now, Mr. Federle reports hearing sounds of play and laughter.

Our prayers are strong. They bring healing, for both spirits in this world and the other world. This Run is an act of resilience and hope.

Hi Shayne, I know the Census and an accurate count of underserved populations is important and has been a concern of yours as long as I have known you. An underfunded Census 2020 is disturbing and I thought you might be interested in this.

Our friend Larra Clark shared this webinar information with me pertaining to the Census. I cannot speak to the organization hosting the webinar but perhaps some of you are familiar with it. The webinar appears to be one that would provide good introductory information to the Census for those of you who are interested. Jennie

Subject: PLEASE JOIN: A Webinar on How to Save the 2020 Census

Dear Friend,

With so much going on, and even as many of our communities are under attack by the current Administration, there is a critical need to focus awareness and to take action on another looming threat that implicates all of the civil and human rights issues and public programs that we care about – the 2020 Census. Decisions are being made now that will determine the success or failure of the 2020 Census to conduct a fair and accurate count, particularly among the many hard to reach populations that are especially vulnerable to being undercounted. Congress is set to severely underfund the US

Census Bureau's effort to secure a fair and accurate count, as well as make other decisions that could undermine the decennial - unless we stop them!

In particular, we want to invite advocates, allies, and community groups around the country who are not yet thinking about the importance of a successful 2020 Census to join our Get Out The Count planning and campaign efforts. So JOIN US! The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights invites interested groups and census newbies to join us for a Census 101 Webinar: Saving the 2020 Census: Why You Should Care and What Can Be Done on Tuesday, January 16, 2017 at 3pm (ET).

Please RSVP for the webinar here. Please forward this invitation to other allies who should be involved in the 2020 Census campaign!

Any questions should be directed to Sergio Lopez (lopez@civilrights.org).

Apply to be the next Green Schools Fellow in Hawaii Written by Phoebe Beierle
Apply by February 5 for the five-year fellowship experience.

The Center for Green Schools at USGBC is excited to announce that applications are being accepted for a new five-year Green Schools Fellowship at the Hawaii Department of Education (DOE), hosted in partnership with WRNS Studio.

This fellowship offers an extraordinary experience in entrepreneurship, paired with a rigorous training program from the Center for Green Schools and its partners in the green schools movement. Green Schools Fellows are individuals who understand the patience and persistence that is required to be a change agent in a complex organization.

The fellow will be selected based on the qualifications outlined in the job description, the person's ability to fit well within the culture of the school district and their ability to make a five-year commitment to the district. Applications are due Mon., February 5 at 6 p.m. EST.

Learn more and apply.

Responsibilities of the fellow

The Hawaii Green Schools Fellow will work directly with the Hawaii DOE in Honolulu to initiate and/or accelerate initiatives to make their schools healthier, more sustainable learning environments. Working across the district and with various community partners, the fellow will also support campuses to expand environmental and sustainability literacy opportunities and ensure a culture of sustainability at all levels of the organization.

The fellow will be trained and coached by the Center for Green Schools and jointly overseen by WRNS Studio and the Hawaii DOE. Professional development support from the Center will include biweekly phone meetings, in-person intensive training and attendance at annual conferences such as Greenbuild and the Green Schools Conference and Expo.

The fellowship program

In an effort to effectively and rapidly transform the environments in which our children learn, the Center for Green Schools officially launched the Green Schools Fellowship program in 2011, after a two-year pilot with the Recovery School District in New Orleans. This program has been successful in bringing green practices to school systems that want to make the case, through proven results, for staff capacity to address sustainability.

Staff positions have been established and retained in New Orleans, Sacramento, Boston and Grand Rapids. Placing and supporting sustainability staff in school districts impacts entire communities with the message that a healthy and vibrant future is central to the education and future success of our children, and the way we design, build and operate schools is crucial to this future.

Ed note: Remember that UNR spring semestre does not start til 1.22 so it is a good time (more parking, less people) to do research at the Knowledge Center. If you've been meaning to check out some collections, this is a good week to do it! sdc

Conveyances of Indian Lands

American Indians who have houses and land may be subject to special rules and laws when it comes to giving, selling or leasing that property. This course will touch on those special rules and laws in what is commonly known as conveyances. To convey is to transfer property properly to make it valid in the eyes of the law. Also included in this training module is a section on Probates. This course will describe the steps in the probate process as it pertains to American Indians. If anyone owns land or a house, it cannot be inherited legally without going through probate. This course will explain the basics of what it is and how it works.

- “Indian Lands” – Who has it?
- Special Considerations for Indian Lands
- How to give, sell or lease your Indian Land
