Atlantis Casino Resort Spa has launched a partnership with Israeli Water Tech Company, WINT, and WaterStart, a water technology incubator based out of Las Vegas. The pilot project has Atlantis using WINT's smart meter technology that uses pattern recognition and algorithms to analyze water flow to cut water costs and help prevent costly water damage.

"This is the first in Reno, it's a first in Nevada, it's a first in the United States," says Perry Sanders, Director of Facilities at Monarch Casinos, who oversees the facilities at Atlantis. "This is literally cutting edge technology that hasn't been tried in the U.S. or Europe yet."

RICHARD TSONG-TAATARI • rtsong.taatarii@startribune.com

Art Owen, spiritual leader of the Prairie Island Indian Community, said a prayer to commemorate the restoration of the Bde Maka Ska name to what was formerly Lake Calhoun in Minneapolis. After nearly 200 years, the city's largest lake reverted to its original name (Dakota for "white earth lake"). Army surveyors in the early 19th century had named it for the congressman from South Carolina, an ardent defender of slavery.
