SBA ANNOUNCES NATIONAL SBIR ROAD TOUR TO ENGAGE INNOVATIVE ENTREPRENEURS

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Small Business Administration announced today it will launch an 18-state road tour connecting entrepreneurs with next generation Research & Development ideas to the largest source of early stage funding led by the SBA’s Small Business Innovation Research and Small Business Technology Transfer programs.

“We are dedicated to supporting America’s entrepreneurs wherever they are. American innovation is not restricted by geographic or cultural boundaries,” SBA Administrator Linda McMahon said. “This tour reflects our commitment to ensuring that these innovators are aware of the resources that can help them turn a big idea into another great American innovation story.”

The SBIR Road Tour plays an important role in increasing engagement with entrepreneurial ecosystems across the country and building out a greater network to support the creation of small businesses focusing on high-impact research. The SBIR Road Tour also advances several goals of the SBIR/STTR programs, including outreach to increase the participation by women, individuals who are socially and economically disadvantaged, as well as small business owners who reside in underrepresented states.

Each SBIR Road Tour stop will be hosted by a local organization involved in supporting entrepreneurs in next generation Research & Development. Program managers from the 11 participating federal agencies will conduct one-on-one meetings with attendees, take part in targeted panels, and share insights into how their agencies make funding decisions.

The SBIR/STTR programs provide $2.5 billion in early stage funding to small businesses each year in a wide variety of technology areas such as unmanned systems, advanced materials, health, cybersecurity and defense. The SBIR/STTR programs execute over 4,000 new awards annually. These awards have helped innovators advance new technologies and have contributed to the creation of thousands of jobs.

NATIONAL ROAD TOUR SCHEDULE 2018:

The Southern Tour will run from April 16-20, with stops in Chattanooga, Tenn., Huntsville, Ala., Little Rock, Ark., Jackson, Miss., and Baton Rouge, La.

The Eastern Tour will run from June 18-22, with stops in Rochester, N.Y., Pittsburgh, Pa., Columbus, Ohio, Charleston, W.Va., and Durham, N.C.

The Pacific Northwest Tour will run from July 17-19, with stops in Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., and Anchorage, Alaska

Finally, the New England Tour will run from August 20-24, with stops in Wilmington, Del., New Haven, Conn., Providence, R.I., Manchester, N.H., and Portland, Maine

Mpls. police stops of Indian women studied

Detainments are out of proportion to population, St. Kate’s research shows.

By LIBOR JANY libor.jany@startribune.com

American Indian women in Minneapolis were stopped, searched and arrested at higher rates last year than any other demographic group, including black men, according to a new study from St. Catherine University.

And while, citywide, a majority of police stops were for traffic violations, American Indians were mostly stopped on the basis of being “suspicious persons,” the report found.

“It definitely is going to have an impact on people’s lives, when we think about family stability, income,” Marina Gorsuch, an economics and political science professor at St. Kate’s, said of the study’s implications. “So even though we can’t say why they’re happening, this is a clear alarm bell of saying that this is happening.”

The study’s authors — Gorsuch, economics Prof. Deborah Rho, and student researcher Nicole Busker, senior economics and business administration major — said the disparities were the result of “a complicated interplay of underlying factors” and didn’t necessarily indicate racial bias on the part of police.

Minneapolis police spokesman John Elder said department officials would need to look at their data and analysis in order to properly comment.

The report’s conclusions were based on police stop and arrest data from November 2016 to October 2017 and figures from the American Community Survey. It will be released Tuesday by the Center for Indian Country Development at the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, which funded the research.

Compared to their share of the population, American Indian women were the most disproportionately pulled over or questioned by police, the report said. While they make up only 1.42 percent of the city's female population, American Indian women were disproportionately detained, representing 6.57 percent of all police stops of women, the report concluded.

“This equates to a ratio of 4.63, meaning that American Indian women were stopped by police 4.63 times as often as they would be if stops were proportional to their percentage of the female population in the city,” the researchers said, adding that they were also five times more likely to get arrested and booked than white women. Most of the stops happened in the Midtown Phillips and East Phillips, particularly along the Lake Street corridor — which the study's authors suspected is tied to the area's higher rates of sex trafficking.

Perhaps more surprising is that they are stopped at a higher rate than black men, whose treatment by law enforcement nationwide has incited a debate about how police patrol minority communities. Nearly half of police stops of men are of blacks, who make up about 20 percent of the population, the report found, equaling a ratio of 2.55.

American Indians in general were also more likely than any other to be searched by police, the report found, appearing to back up earlier studies showing racial disparities in police practices.

In 2016, Minneapolis police started tracking the ethnicities and other demographic characteristics of drivers and pedestrians stopped by its officers, in response to an earlier American Civil Liberties Union report criticizing the department for disproportionately stopping black and American Indian residents.

In response, the department started training its officers to recognize their inherent biases and acknowledge law enforcement's history of hostility against minority communities.

Yucca Mtn/Nuclear Waste (Licensing Support Network Advisory Review Panel (LSNARP))

Licensing Support Network Advisory Review Panel (LSNARP) member representatives and members of the public who expressed an interest in LSNARP activities previously were advised of late-2017 on-line training that was conducted to provide a basic understanding of the LSN Library’s features and operability. To make LSN Library training accessible to anyone at any time, a series of short training videos have been prepared that describe how to use the LSN Library. These can be accessed on-line from the agency’s YouTube Channel Playlist or via the LSN Library webpage. In addition to a three-minute introductory video on the LSN Library, there are ten one-to-three-minute videos that explain and demonstrate different aspects of the LSN Library search process.

Additionally, as the agenda for next week’s February 2018 LSNARP meeting indicates, in the late afternoon following the February 27 meeting session, an approximately one-hour LSN Library orientation session will be conducted for those LSNARP member representatives and members of the public attending the meeting on site or virtually. This session offers an opportunity for participants to receive additional information regarding, and discuss particular aspects of, the LSN Library search process. To make this session as useful as possible to the participants, if you have any particular questions about the LSN Library search process that you would like to have discussed during the February 27 orientation session, you are invited to submit those questions to LSNAdministrator@nrc.gov by Friday, February 23, 2018. Although questions are welcome during the orientation session to the extent time allows, questions submitted by February 23 will be addressed first at the February 27 session.
