Ryan Jackson, San Francisco Chronicle, 3/19/18

The Trinity River water that had sustained the Hupa people's fishery and 10,000-year-old economy, culture and religion now supplies industrial agriculture with irrigation and hydropower. WestlandsWater District uses the lion's share of that water.

The Department of Interior had a no good, very embarrassing week. livescience — March 18, 2018

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke insulted Japanese Americans, individuals with specials needs, veterans, and seniors. He's likewise dealing with heat for supposed travel high-ends and for blending federal government service with politics.

Here ' s the rundown:

- Lawmakers are calling racism after Zinke reacted to Agent Colleen Hanabusa ' s demand that National forest Service money the conservation of prisoner-of-war camp that held Japanese Americans throughout WWII by stating, "Oh, konnichiwa." Senator Tammy Duckworth of Illinois tweeted, " Nope. Bigotry is not OKAY " and Senator Mazie Hirono of Hawaii called the remark " flippant & & juvenile. " -LRB- *****).
- Zinke informed the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee that he wishes to make it more costly to check out a national forest, blaming the cost walking on granny and grandfather and other individuals qualified for affordable entry. "When you provide marked down [rates] to the senior, veterans, and the handicapped and do it by the carload, not a lot individuals really pay at our front door," he stated.
- The White Home informed Zinke and 3 other cabinet members to be on their finest habits after badethics reports Zinke came under heat for travel expenses (he insists he never ever took a personal jet due to the fact that his airplane had props) and \$139,000 doors.
- Homeowners in East Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, thought it was weird that Zinke came to their hometown in February to personally provide a ritualistic look for $3007 million to money the clean-up of deserted coal mines. Guard dogs state Zinke was utilizing his function as Interior Secretary to provide his celebration a leg-up in the Tuesday unique election — although Democrat Conor Lamb won anyhow.

And to top all of it off, the Bureau of Land Management issued "vision cards" for staff members to use as a tip of the bureau's dedication to, exactly what else — oil. The cards lay out the bureau ' s assisting concepts, and function commissioned art that portrays an oil well and a ranches.

Taxing sugar-sweetened beverages increase stigma for low-income groups, Aboriginal peoples Dr. James Goodall

When thinking about taxing sugar-sweetened drinks in Canada, policy-makers need to take a look at lessons gained from tobacco tax, particularly how tax might increase inequalities and preconception, argues an analysis in CMAJ (Canadian Medical Association Journal)

” Supporters of a tax on sugar-sweetened drinks fast to stress favorable elements of a tobacco tax; nevertheless, an extensive contrast analysis exposes other lessons about worsening of injustice and preconception, consisting of racial preconception, in already-marginalized populations,” composes Natalie Riediger, University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Manitoba, with Andrea Bombak, Central Michigan University, Mount Pleasant, Michigan.

The authors take a look at the concerns around tax of sugar-sweetened drinks through a social justice lens.

” Numerous public health policies can have unexpected effects for some groups and it is necessary to think about this when carrying out brand-new policies,” they compose.

Individuals of low socioeconomic status and Aboriginal populations in Canada take in more sugar-sweetened drinks than the basic population and have greater rates of weight problems and diabetes.

” For tax of sugar-sweetened drinks to be reliable as a step of population health, it should impact usage in these populations.”

The authors recommend that taxing just particular sugar-sweetened drinks, particularly sodas, might increase preconception around weight problems and more isolate marginalized individuals. Sweetened coffee beverages, which are generally consumed in locations where individuals of greater socioeconomic status live or work, are not being suggested for tax, regardless of their increasing usage.

” A sweetened drink tax intended just at routine sodas might bring classist and racist overtones that might worsen preconception directed at already-marginalized groups,” compose the authors. “Simply puts, financially advantaged individuals might continue to consume their frappuccino, untaxed, while less rich people are taxed for their soda pop, regardless of comparable extra sugar material.”

Taxing soda might likewise impact relations with Aboriginal individuals who survive on reserves where there are long-lasting water advisories due to the fact that of hazardous supply. Lots of people in these scenarios count on sodas for hydration.

The authors advise participation of Aboriginal individuals in establishing tax policies around sugar-sweetened drinks.

” Sugar-sweetened drinks as the brand-new tobacco: taking a look at a proposed tax policy through a Canadian social justice lens” is released March 19,2018 .

Mass Execution of aboriginal Children from the Mohawk Residential School located in Ontario. They took all those children and stood them up next to a big ditch, then they shot them all and they all fell into the ditch. Some of the kids were still alive and they just poured the dirt in on top of them. Buried them alive.

Prisoners of the church. This mass murder happened in 1943 – in Brantford, Ontario, on land occupied by the Canadian Army, at its Basic Training Camp Number 20

Lorna McNaughton of Ohsweken, Ontario: is a survivor of the infamous “Mush Hole”, the Brantford Mohawk Indian residential school, run by the Church and Crown of England until 1970.

Why were these children shot?

The school was overcrowded just then. She was there, Lorna saw the army bring in all these cots for lots of new kids who showed up from all over the country. They must have just wanted to get rid of all the extra hungry mouths; it was wartime and everything was rationed. One day those new kids were in the dorms, then they were all taken out, and were never seen again.

A probable site of this mass burial of the executed children has been located, and is now under the protection and jurisdiction of the Onkwehonwe Mohawk Nation and its clan mothers.

The investigation into the Canadian Genocide continues.

Lesley Williams-Hawley March 18 at 1:13pm · The willows are working...

And so... Why as women do we go in two very different directions? There are the passive and then there are the strong. Where do you find the middle ground? I understand my role as a woman... to raise my children, to support my spouse... to nurture, to give life... to be the base of my family. There has never been a question of that in my mind. I don't mind being a Woman... i actually love it a lot. We have so much power inside of us... and strength... we know pain, we know loss, we know the connection of growing life inside of us and the unbelievable feeling of love we have for our children... but life... life makes you hard... getting beat by the man you love... being molested by people in your life who were never supposed to hurt you... losing those in your life too soon. and the sad reality that life isn't a fairytale... and to survive you need instinct, strength and a backbone. The hell if I am gonna let life break me... but in a sense it does... because being strong hurts too... carrying people or standing up for people hurts... as well as watching those you love and respect hurt. So stay strong my ladies... and men too (i guess lol) and support each other... we got this.
