Walmart Offers Dollar a Day College Education June 1, 2018 3:38 PM by Susan Dutca

Walmart, the largest private sector employer in the United States, is touting its subsidized online college tuition for its employees as it looks to attract and retain talent in a tight market. It may sound too good to be true that Walmart plans to offer employees a college education for $1 a day...what's the catch?

The retail giant, which employs over 1.5 million employees throughout the United States, is hoping to "increase [our] associate base" and increase retention, according to Drew Holler, Vice President of Associate Experience. "A lot of employers that have done this have seen an uptick in their application flow." With Walmart's college tuition plan, both full-time and part-time employees who have been with the company for at least 90 days will have an opportunity to attend college for $1 a day and receive access to discounted college tuition, books, and a coach who can instruct them on the appropriate program while guiding them through the application program. The Walmart college tuition program is limited to online degree programs offered by three schools - University of Florida, Brandman University, and Bellevue University - and students must be pursuing a bachelor's or associate degree in either business or supply chain management. Walmart "declined to disclose the cost of the program," according to The Wall Street Journal.

While the Walmart college tuition plan is aimed to give employees "a chance at upward mobility off the retail point," the move is, according to some critics, "likely to be disproportionately appealing to people who are on the more ambitious end of the distribution." This program is not the first of its kind to be offered by a large employer - or even by Walmart itself. In fact, Walmart offered a college tuition perk back in 2010 through a deal with the American Publication Inc. to "provide discounted classes at the for-profit American Public University." Other large corporations such as Starbucks, McDonald's, Chick-fil-A, have historically offered college tuition programs as a means of recruiting and retaining employees. College tuition programs also pay off for large employers who receive favorable tax treatment; the IRS enables employers to give employees "several thousand dollars' worth of tuition benefits tax-free."

Adopt-A-Crop 2018 - Native Seed Search

This year we are celebrating the Southwest's very special bean, the tepary. This resilient, drought-tolerant bean has been stewarded by the tribes of the Greater Southwest for centuries and is still a vital part of traditional diets. Five teparies will be regenerated this year in partnership with farmers in AZ & NM. Please choose one (or more!) seeds to adopt - your donation supports the 2018 growing season and ensures that we can continue to make these and other seeds available to gardeners and farmers.

If you donate $100 or more, we will send you a packet of seeds from the harvest.

Hopi White Tepary:

Coming from Hotevilla at almost 5,600 ft., this is the highest elevation North American tepary in the collection. Perhaps the slightly cooler temperatures to which this tepary is adapted are what make it larger and plumper than most teparies. Traditionally dry-farmed on the Hopi mesas. This bean will be grown in Moenkopi, Hopi by Jeremy King, Traditional Farmer and Cultural Consultant for Moenkopi Developers Corporation.

Little Tucson Brown:

An early-maturing tepary that comes from Ali Chukson (Little Tucson) east of Sells on the Tohono O'odham Nation. The seeds are a deep burnt orange color, and more round than many of the low desert tepary beans. Janna Anderson, Organic Farmer and Owner of Pinnacle Farms, will be growing this in Phoenix, AZ this season.

Pima Beige and Brown:

This colorful accession comes from Santan on the Gila River Indian Reservation. There is one cup of seed remaining in the seed bank, designated as "seed for regeneration". We'll be growing 1/4 of this seed at the NS/S Conservation Center in Tucson, AZ this season.

Paiute Mixed:

This diverse mixture is the northernmost collection of tepary beans at NS/S. It comes from the Shivwits Paiute Reservation in far southwestern Utah, though the man who shared them said they came through his grandfather's family, who were Mojave. These seeds will be grown in Santa Clara Pueblo, NM this season.

Colonia Morelos Speckled:

Collected by NS/S co-founder Barney Burns in 1988 in Colonia Morelos, Sonora, a farming village at the confluence of two rivers. This beautiful speckled bean was selected out of a batch of mostly white teparies grown by two farmers there. It is one of the few that displays both white and lilac-colored flowers. This crop will be grown by Clayton Harvey and Emily Maheux of Ndee Bikiyaa (The Peoples Farm) in Canyon Day, AZ.

Today's selection -- from A Brief History of France by Cecil Jenkins.

The Enlightenment stemmed from the continued increase in publishing, the 17th and 18th century breakthroughs in science, and the increasing death and debt brought by war:

"In the France of the Enlightenment [in the mid 1700s] there was ... a whole new intellectual climate, fostered by greater literacy, an increase in the publication of books and newspapers, and of course the exchange of ideas through such famous literary salons as those of Madame du Deffand or the passionate Julie de Lespinasse. The serious discussion of ideas had also moved from the old university orthodoxies to a score of new académies, or provincial societies set up on the model of the Academie Francaise -- it was for a competition of the Academie de Dijon that Rousseau wrote his famous essay on the origin of inequality among men. 'Discours sur l'origine et les fondements de l'inégalité parmi les hommes'. Libraries were also being set up by rich individuals, while booksellers were renting out books by the day. And it was in this situation that an intelligentsia was arising, writers of often humble origin who were no longer dependent on noble protectors but could actually live by their work -- Diderot was the son of a cutler, while both Rousseau and Beaumarchais were watchmakers' sons. As such they were the voices of the new educated community which was excluded from political representation and which would ultimately provide a more profound challenge to the monarchy than the privileged parlement.

Discourse on Inequality

"Much of this activity was stimulated by the political tensions within the society, such as the religious intolerance dramatized by the execution of Jean Calas, a Protestant merchant of Toulouse in 1762. Wrongly accused of killing his own son who, it was said, wanted to convert to Catholicism, he was condemned in a farcical trial and broken on the wheel while proclaiming his innocence. In protest, Voltaire opened up a famous debate on tolerance and had Calas rehabilitated posthumously. Another stimulus was the increasing awareness of the outside world and of the challengingly different customs of non-European peoples -- the cultural relativism exemplified by Montesquieu's satirical portrait of French society in his Lettres persanes (Persian Letters, 1721), as in Bougainville's Voyage autour du monde (A Voyage Around the World, 1771), which nourished the idea of the 'noble savage'.

"However, the catalyst for much of this intellectual ferment was doubtless the sense of a new scientific outlook, influenced by the empiricism of the English philosopher John Locke and by the inductive method and mechanics of Isaac Newton, offering the prospect of a new conceptual model of the world. In the monumental twenty—eight volume Encyclopédie (1751-72), intended as a 'collection of human knowledge', Diderot and his fellow philosophes sought to bring together all these strands into a coherent structure — in effect a fusion of Cartesian rationalism and English empiricism in the service of a new view of the world and society."

Federal Water Tap

Army Corps Hearing

The Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works holds a hearing on June 13 to discuss the Army Corps' practice of allowing local agencies to contract for "surplus water" from federal reservoirs.

Rescission Decision

The House passed a bill to authorize pulling back some $3 billion in unspent federal funds. President Trump asked for the authority on May 8.

Water-related rescissions are: $107 million from Hurricane Sandy relief, $50 million from USDA's flood prevention work, $37 million from rural water and sewer grants, and $10 million for water quality research

Glen Canyon Dam Advisory Committee

The Interior Department is looking to fill open seats on a panel that advises the agency on operating Glen Canyon, one of the country's largest dams and reservoirs.

Representatives of environmental groups, recreational groups, federal power purchase contractors, and others are encouraged to apply.

Nominations are due July 16. They can be sent via email to Brent Rhees, regional director of the Bureau of Reclamation, brhees@usbr.gov.

Heat Risk Map

To kick off summer, the National Weather Service rolled out a map that shows the seven-day heat risk. The map is color-coded from no increased risk (green) to very high risk for all people (magenta).

Subject: [New post] Humpy Dumpty Duty: Trump Regularly Rips Up Documents, Requiring Staff To Tape Them Back Together To Comply With Federal Law
There is an interesting new story about a bizarre practice by President Donald Trump who reportedly rips up material given to him despite the duty to preserve the documents under the Presidential Records Act. Two staffers have recounted how they were required to spend considerable time taping the documents back together to stay in compliance with the PRA. They reportedly complained about the duty for people making $60,000 a year. They were suddenly fired. This Humpy Dumpty duty raises some serious questions of federal violations.
