Action at 4:30 am today Saturday at Tacoma immigration detention center to let them know we are still here. 80 took part in action making circle at entrance. Police came and told action participants that, ICE employees want to go home to their families! Activists asked for 5 minutes...after 30 min activists said 5 minutes Indian time. Photo credit Ian Zabarte.

Interesting note from latest SHRAB meeting: It was reported that the Department had to turn away some job applicants BECAUSE THEY COULD NOT READ CURSIVE. As those who do research, so many of the records important to proving tribal rights, passing on cultural knowledge, and relating aspects of life long ago, are written in cursive. Do not let your heritage slip away because this skill is disappearing (I cannot read shorthand, which is also a language that often contains valuable clues.) sdc

Newspaper Archives (for out-of-state readers, similar programs exist in almost every state)

I (Jeff Kintop) get a lot of questions about Nevada newspapers and how we can digitize them and make them searchable online. Here's an update as to what is going on in the world of Nevada digital newspapers. Copy this link <https://nvdpn.wordpress.com/> to you favorites on your web browser and check on the progress of Nevada Digital Newspaper Project. Here is an excerpt from the project's blog.

In 2014, the University of Nevada–Las Vegas (UNLV) University Libraries were selected to participate in the National Digital Newspaper Program (NDNP), a partnership between the National Endowment of the Humanities (NEH) and the Library of Congress (LC). The program is a long-term effort to provide permanent access to a national digital resource of historic newspapers published between 1836 and 1922, selected and digitized by NEH-funded institutions from all U.S. states and territories. Digitized newspapers are made available on the Chronicling America website, hosted by the LC.

Each state that is awarded the NEH grant selects, digitizes, and delivers 100,000 pages of historic newspapers to the Library of Congress. Currently, there are about 8.1 million pages of historic newspapers from almost every state and territory. UNLV is working in conjunction with the Nevada State Library and Archives (NSLA), the University of Nevada–Reno (UNR) Knowledge Center, and a broad support of stakeholders across Nevada. <https://nvdnp.wordpress.com/>

During the first grant cycle (2014-2016) the NDNP staff (thanks Dana Bullinger and Melissa Stoner!) processed and digitized 100,000+ pages of Nevada newspapers representing three Nevada counties (Ormsby, Lincoln, Nye). Click here for a complete list <https://nvdnp.wordpress.com/newspapers/first-cycle/>.

During the second phase of the Nevada Digital Newspaper Project (2016-2018) we will contribute to the nation's largest free newspaper repository Chronicling America another set of 100,000 historic pages from Nevada.

The project staff, Carrie Gaxiola and Yvonne Wilk (and a big “thank you” to previous team members Oscar Giurcovich and Marina Georgieva), work hard to ensure deliverables with high quality and meeting all production deadlines set by the Library of Congress.

During this grant cycle we have planned to digitize 5 main groups of newspapers each of them representing a different Nevada county (Elko, Eureka, Esmeralda, Storey, Lyon). Check out the titles here. <https://nvdnp.wordpress.com/newspapers/second-cycle/>

In January 2018 the UNLV Libraries submitted a proposal for grant renewal to continue preserving the Nevada history and to digitize another set of 100,000 pages of historic newspapers. If we get approved this will bring our contribution to Chronicling America up to 300,000 historic pages from Nevada by the end of the third cycle!

Should we receive funding for a third phase of the project, the Nevada Digital Newspaper Project Advisory Board has selected the more titles to be digitized. They will ensure a broad geographic coverage of historic Nevada newspapers available online as it will cover each county in the state of Nevada.

National Historical Publications and Records Commission Names New Executive Director

Press Release · Tuesday, March 13, 2018 (just rec'd,,,,,sdc) Washington, DC

Archivist of the United States David S. Ferriero today announced the appointment of Christopher Eck as the Executive Director of the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, effective April 1, 2018.

“Chris brings a breadth of experience to the job, both in the Federal government at several agencies, as well as his work in Florida for historical preservation,” said Ferriero. “He is the kind of leader and creative thinker that will steer the NHPRC forward, and we are excited about his ideas to connect the work of the National Archives to the nation’s archives.”

As Executive Director, Chris will lead the National Archives grants program, which funds projects to provide access to historical records held in collections across the country and provides leadership for initiatives in digital publishing, innovation in archives, electronic records, public engagement, partnerships with state archives, and professional development. Since 1964, the NHPRC has awarded nearly 5,000 grants and created new initiatives such as Founders Online and the Digital Editions Publishing Cooperatives program.

Chris comes to the National Archives from the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency as its Terrestrial Archaeology Program Manager for the Strategic Partnerships Directorate. His team worked with archivists, historians, and archaeologists to undertake activities that assist in locating and recovering missing U.S. service member remains from around the world for their identification and reburial in the United States. Prior to that role, Chris worked as Federal Preservation Officer for the First Responder Network Authority, as Cultural Resources Program Manager for the Air National Guard headquarters, and as Historic Preservation Officer for the General Services Administration’s regional headquarters in Atlanta.

He has also led the Miami-Dade Office of Historic Preservation as its Executive Director and was Administrator and County Historic Preservation Officer for the Broward County Historical Commission. He was worked on the boards of the Fort Lauderdale Historic Preservation Board, the Florida Trust for Historic Preservation, and as a library visiting committee member for Loyola University New Orleans.

Chris earned a B.A. in History from Loyola University New Orleans, an M.A. in History and Historical Archaeology from the University of Massachusetts Boston, and a J.D. from the University of Miami. Two of his most recent publications include the book, Southern Maryland's Historic Landmarks (Arcadia 2016), and an article, "Preserving Heritage: The Role of Media," in The Encyclopedia of Global Archaeology (Springer Science 2014).

U.S. Allows Nestlé to Keep Piping Water From Drought-Ridden Southern California

By Lorraine Chow, EcoWatch, 6/28/18

The U.S. Forest Service offered Nestlé a three-year permit on Wednesday to keep taking millions of gallons of water from the San Bernardino National Forest in California, the Associated Press reported.

"Bottled water is hopelessly impractical for cows, so you have cows in this heatwave that haven't got anything to drink. It's a desperate situation. It is not just us, it's affecting a whole load of farms in the area. It's having a huge effect on business." –Richard Webster, a farmer near Ashbourne, England, in reference to the impact of water shortages on area cattle. Webster's farm is currently without running water, and his local water utility offered only bottled water to hydrate his cattle. A scorching heatwave is threatening livestock and crops across the U.K. The Guardian
