Life in the Vortex

A crack in the Earth's magnetic field over the weekend (not uncommon around the Equinox) allowed the Solar Wind to pour in over Norway. The result? A fantastic display of the Northern Lights, that look like it's almost flowing to the ground! Very cool.

The American Indian Movement, 1968-1978

Founded in July 1968 in Minneapolis, Minnesota, the American Indian Movement (AIM) is an American Indian advocacy group organized to address issues related to sovereignty, leadership, and treaties. Particularly in its early years, AIM also protested racism and civil rights violations against Native Americans. During the 1950s, increasing numbers of American Indians had been forced to move away from reservations and tribal culture because of federal Indian termination policies intended to assimilate them into mainstream American culture. Founders of AIM included Mary Jane Wilson, Dennis Banks, Vernon Bellecourt, Clyde Bellecourt, and George Mitchell, while other activists like Russell Means worked with the organization prominently in the 1970s.

AIM staged a number of protest actions on historically significant sites of injustice and violence perpetrated by the federal government against Native Americans. These protests included the occupation of Alcatraz Island in 1970, protests at the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs in 1972, the occupation of Wounded Knee on the Pine Ridge Reservation in 1973, and the Longest Walk spiritual march from Alcatraz to Washington, DC to support tribal sovereignty and bring attention to anti-Indian legislation in 1978. AIM continues its work to the present day, speaking out against injustices and working to improve conditions for Native Americans. This primary source set uses documents, photographs, videos, and news stories to tell the story of the first decade of the American Indian Movement.

Water Shorts

$6 billion: Funding available for the next round of water infrastructure loans. Utilities will have 90 days to submit a letter of interest once the notice is published in the Federal Register. (U.S. Environmental Protection Agency)

$4.1 million: Federal government aid to Mozambique after Cyclone Idai. A disaster response team that helps with logistics was also dispatched, on March 24. (U.S. Agency for International Development)

$5.2 million: Research funding for three projects to clean up polluted water by using less energy. Columbia University will look to remove nitrogen, while Oregon State University and Oklahoma University are focusing on salty wastewater from oil and gas production. (ARPA-E)

California Lawsuit

The Trump administration filed a lawsuit that seeks to invalidate a California agency's decision to leave more water in the San Joaquin River and its tributaries in order to protect fish. It's the latest clash between the administration and the state over environmental policy.

The lawsuit claims that the river flow requirements, which the State Water Resources Control Board adopted in December, violate state environmental review laws and would impair the operation of New Melones Dam, a federal structure that supplies water to farms and cities in the southern half of the state.

Colorado River Hearings

Officials from the Colorado River basin told committees in the House and Senate that Congress should rapidly sign legislation to allow the seven states to implement plans to keep more water in key reservoirs.

Sen. Martha McSally (R-AZ) said she plans to introduce a bill "as soon as possible" that will authorize the agreements, which cover water-saving practices in the basin through 2026. "We want to get this legislation across the finish line and signed into law," she said.

Interior Confirmation Hearing

Despite questions from Democrats about his ethics and potential conflicts of interest, David Bernhardt appears to be on his way to confirmation as the Interior secretary.

“My intent is to move quickly to confirm you,” said Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) during her opening statement.

Bernhardt has served as the department’s deputy under President Trump, as well as its top lawyer during the second Bush administration. Between those appointments, he worked as a lawyer and lobbyist for oil and gas companies, mining companies, and irrigation districts – industries and agencies that he would oversee as head of Interior. Thus the ethics concerns.

Wheeler’s Water Remarks

Andrew Wheeler, the EPA administrator, said in a speech at the Wilson Center that the United States can aid global water security in three ways.

“It is our hope that we can elevate these issues to global priority and generate the urgency and unity needed to address them,” Wheeler said.

One is drinking water research, education, and testing. Wheeler touted a water quality testing lab in Ghana that is the result of a partnership between EPA and the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The second is reducing marine pollution, notably from plastics and solid waste. And third is infrastructure investment.

PFAS Detection Act

Congressional representatives introduced a bipartisan bill to fund PFAS testing technology and an assessment of the occurrence of the chemicals in the environment.

The PFAS Detection Act provides $45 million over five years to develop analytical technologies and methods, then to sample rivers, groundwater, springs, and lakes that are used as drinking water sources and are located near facilities that might have released PFAS compounds.

Pebble Mine Recusal

Andrew Wheeler said he will not be involved in permitting or review decisions regarding the proposed Pebble mine, a controversial gold and copper deposit in Alaska, Bloomberg reported.

Wheeler’s former law firm had contact with the mine developer, though Wheeler himself has not.

Trump States Support for Great Lakes Restoration

His fiscal year 2020 budget proposal recommended cutting funding for the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative by 90 percent. But at a rally in Michigan last week, President Trump said he now supports full funding of the initiative at its authorized level of $300 million, the Detroit News reports.

“I support the Great Lakes,” Trump said, according to news reports. “They’re beautiful. They’re big, very deep. Record deepness, right?”

The deepest lake in North America is Great Slave Lake, in Canada, with a maximum depth of 2,015 feet. The deepest lake in the United States is Crater Lake, in Oregon, at 1,949 feet. Lake Superior, the deepest of the Great Lakes, has a maximum depth of 1,333 feet.

Water System Risk and Emergency Planning

The EPA published requirements and timelines for drinking water utilities to complete risk evaluations and emergency plans. Congress ordered the two documents in an infrastructure bill that was signed last October.

Utilities must evaluate risks from natural hazards, sabotage, chemical spills, and financial constraints. The risk assessment informs the emergency plans, which detail how the utility will respond to identified threats.

The rules apply to utilities serving more than 3,300 customers.

EPA Environmental Finance Advisory Board Meeting

The board, which advises the agency on how to fund environmental improvements and projects, will hold a public meeting on April 17 and 18 in Washington, D.C.

On the agenda is stormwater financing.
