About NDNSports.com

NDNSPORTS.COM began in the fall of 2000. We were two NDN college students finishing up our last years of college. We have since graduated with our respective degrees. We try to keep the website up-to-date the best we can and we also, try to get every athlete we can whether they compete in college or in the pros, but since we stay busy with work and family. We depend on YOU, the visitor, to point us in the right direction to help provide any knowledge of NDN athletes. The goal of our site is to promote awareness about Native American athletes competing in a wide variety of college and professional sports to the public and native community online.

Also, our intent is to provide you with up to date information on NDN athletes from the various states that they compete in, since they may not be the same states they are from, their friends and family will have a means of keeping track of them. We want them to be recognized for their achievements on and off the field of competition. We hope you enjoy our site and find it interesting enough to come back as well as inform others to what we are trying to do.

If you have any question, comments, suggestions or if you simply would like to inform us about a NDN athlete in your area please use the Contact Us page to share your information

Again, we hope you enjoy the site and come back often!

America's First Citizens Elect Their First Representative

- The 1835 Treaty of New Echota between the US and the Cherokee Nation cost Cherokee Indians their homelands and led to thousands of lives being lost on the Trail of Tears. But one article in the treaty also included the right to appoint a nonvoting delegate to the US House of Representatives. Although available for nearly 200 years old, the position had never been filled until now.
- On Thursday the Cherokee Nation approved former president Obama's nominee, Kimberly Teehee, to be its first delegate. Teehee grew up in Oklahoma and interned in the 1980s for the Cherokee Nation's first female chief, Wilma Mankiller. Teehee is an attorney who has worked years on Capitol Hill for Indian Country policy and women's rights. (NPR)

- Who said eco-friendly needs to look eco-friendly? Introducing Nothing New (literally). They use the most sustainable materials combined with a luxury designer aesthetic to create a truly special shoe.
- 100% recycled plastic (5.6 plastic water bottles to be exact) is repurposed to make each pair of sneakers. Sustainable with style, Nothing New is also "walking-on-clouds" comfortable – with Ortholite EcoStep insoles and True Stitch Construction. It's Nothing New, but nothing ordinary.
- Nothing New also has the "Virtuous Circle Program" where you can send them back your sneakers and they will either refurbish them and give them to charity or disassemble them and put all of the materials back into the supply chain and even give you $20 off your next purchase.

WHAT DEFINES A DESTINATION?

Everything from technology to music to sports can help define a destination's audience. Hear from leaders in those fields and gain insights into what's trending in destination marketing at the Nevada Governor's Global Tourism Summit, Nov. 12-14 in Las Vegas.

Futurist Cathy Hackl will discuss what travel will look like in the years to come.

Cathy Hackl of Magic Leap, an augmented reality technology company, is set to talk about immersive tours, holographic concierges and other concepts that may define what travel means in the 2020s. Hackl was named by LinkedIn as one of the Top Voices in Technology for 2018.

Andy Schuon of Spkr will open the conference with his keynote address.

Andy Schuon, co-founder and CEO of audio platform Spkr, will explain music's role in shaping a destination's image in his keynote address. Schuon got his start in radio before moving to MTV to head programming and production. He's also held leadership roles at Viacom and Warner Brothers, and co-founded Revolt TV and Pressplay/Napster.

Mark Badain, NFL Raiders' team president, will take the stage with representatives from the Las Vegas Knights and other area sports businesses in a panel discussion titled Las Vegas as The New Sports Capital of the World. When the Raiders begin playing in Las Vegas in 2020, they will be the latest in a string of sports franchises to come to the city. Badain has been with the Raiders since 1991, and now oversees its business operations.

Call For Proposals for Northern Nevada Diversity Summit

The Cultural Diversity Committee (UNR) is seeking proposals for presentations, workshops, and posters for its sixth annual Northern Nevada Diversity Summit, titled “Building Bridges in a Changing World.” The summit will take place on Thursday, April 11, 2019 at the University of Nevada, Reno campus in the Joe Crowley Student Union and is free for all to attend. Below is the link to the call for proposals submission form with further information about the summit and proposal submission guidelines. Proposals to present must be submitted before Monday, December 10, 2018 at 11:59 PM (PST) and must be submitted online. Questions about the summit should be directed to Matthew Aguirre at maguirre@unr.edu.

InNEVenture Fund applications

Funding to determine if your technologies and business ideas have commercialization potential. Faculty, students, staff and recent grads with technology and business ideas are all welcome to apply. Project submissions are encouraged from across all colleges and industries and applications for both products and services are welcome. The fund totals $100,000 and is poised to make investments of varying sizes. Applications are being accepted through Saturday, Sept. 22. For more information, contact Ellen Purpus at epurpus@unr.edu or at 775-784-8228.

New Search Feature: Optical Character Recognition (OCR)

With more than 92 million pages of digitized records available to search in the National Archives Catalog, we are always working on ways to improve search results to better help you find what you're looking for.

That's why we're excited to share a new feature in the Catalog: Optical Character Recognition, or OCR.

PV2 Ruben Gutierrez a general mechanic, 4/21/1997, National Archives Identifier 6504747

What is OCR?

OCR converts images that contain typed, handwritten, or printed text into text that can be read and searched by a computer.

Previously, records in the Catalog were only searchable based on the titles, descriptions, and other fields entered by archivists, or by tags and transcriptions entered by citizen archivists. Now, with OCR capability, text from some images in the Catalog can be extracted, making that text searchable and more likely to come up in your search results.

Currently, the Catalog's new OCR engine is applied to records in either JPG or PDF format added to the Catalog since June 2019. NARA is exploring how to retroactively process records from before that point, but right now this feature applies to millions of pages!

Here's what you can expect and how it works:

A search for "Melvin H. Coulston" returns this Bureau of Indian Affairs record with OCR data. The search term is bolded.

SEARCH TIP - If you are searching for a name or phrase, surround it in quotation marks to do an exact phrase search.

To explore the results further, click on the blue description title. On the description page that follows, you can see the pages where your search term is found. They are listed below the description title and to the left of the image viewer:

Likewise, you may also see the page thumbnails highlighted beneath the image viewer that contain your search term. Clicking on any of the pages in the list or a highlighted page thumbnail will take you to that page.

Try it out!

You can test the capability yourself by running one of the following searches and clicking the first result returned for each:

- "Dornier Aviation Plants"
- "Did you bail out? No"
- "Sea Devil Torpedo Attack"

We still have work to do! Right now, we are investigating options to re-process items for OCR that were in the Catalog prior to June 2019. Additionally, records that are only available in PDF format currently do not provide the page jumping or highlighting capability.

OCR is not perfect! While this technology helps to make records more searchable, we still find human-entered transcriptions to be more accurate than OCR, so we still need your help as citizen archivists to transcribe records in the Catalog, and help decipher that tricky handwriting!

In case you were interested...

Technical specs: NARA's new OCR engine is powered by the open source Tesseract software. As records are added to NARA's Amazon Web Services \(AWS\) S3 cloud storage, it is run through image processing powered by a series of AWS Lambda functions.

Citizen Scanners in the National Archives Innovation Hub have officially scanned 500,000 pages of historical records!

Following scanning, each digitized page is then added to the National Archives Catalog for anyone to view and download. Currently, nearly 490,000 pages of records scanned in the Hub are available in the National Archives Catalog. You can view all records scanned by citizen contributors in the Catalog so far.

Here is the 500,000th page scanned in the Innovation Hub:

This is a form that Antonio Dardell filled out to apply for an increase in his Civil War veteran's pension. Antonio Dardell is an interesting soldier, being one of the small number of Chinese American soldiers who fought in the American Civil War.

Dardell had likely been adopted as a young boy by an American whaling ship captain, and brought to Connecticut. He enlisted in the 27th Connecticut Infantry Regiment at age 19. After the war he worked as a tinsmith, and in 1880 he became a naturalized citizen, showing his honorable discharge certificate in lieu of a Declaration of Intent. More information can be found in this "The Blue, the Gray, and the Chinese" blog post.

This pension file was scanned as part of a two-week project by two citizen scanners who were interested in digitizing records relating to Asian American history. In addition to Antonio Dardell's pension, the citizen scanners also worked on his Compiled Military Service Record, and the CMSRs and pensions of other Chinese American soldiers.

Many thanks to everyone who's worked in or adjacent to the Hub now or in the past! Here's to the next 500,000 pages.

Now that these pages are scanned and added to our Catalog, help transcribe them to make them more searchable! Our latest citizen archivist mission features records scanned by citizen contributors in our Innovation Hub.
