News from NARF

Native Rights Are Making it in the Movies

We are excited to let you know about two recently released mini-documentaries that feature NARF and some of the important social justice work that you make possible.

As part of the Be IllumiNative campaign, Paramount Network recently sent Gil Birmingham, who plays Chairman Thomas Rainwater on their Yellowstone series, to visit the Fort Belknap Indian Community, meet their President Andy Werk, and learn about the tribe's efforts to stop the building of the Keystone XL Pipeline. Watch his journey.

Meanwhile, Public Square Media visited North Dakota to see how activists, attorneys, and voters banded together to defend access to the ballot box. Watch their inspiring story.

New CU Fellow Joins Project to Implement UN Declaration

A warm welcome to Danielle Lazore-Thompson, the new American Indian Law Program Fellow at the University of Colorado Law School. In this role, Danielle will be an integral part of the joint NARF-CU Law project working to achieve domestic implementation of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples in the United States.

She also will assist in the collaboration between NARF and CU Law related to on-going negotiations at the World Intellectual Property Organization for the protection of indigenous peoples' traditional knowledge, traditional cultural expressions, and genetic resources. Danielle (pictured third from left with CU and NARF staff) is a member of the St. Regis Mohawk Tribe and a graduate of Tufts University and Cornell Law School.

IDA Open Call for Documentary Magazine Editorial Fellows

In our ongoing mission to serve, empower and engage a diverse range of voices, perspectives and experiences from the documentary community, we are calling for applications for its newly launched Documentary Magazine Editorial Fellowship program. Funded in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA), this fellowship is designed to enhance opportunities for writers from underserved and underrepresented communities to participate in the editorial planning process at, and contribute content to Documentary magazine.

The fellowship program, which runs from January through December 2020, will provide stipends of $2,000 each and the opportunity to attend an industry event for four emerging writers. Please help us spread the word and share widely!

Billionaire Explains Record $750 Million Donation to Caltech for Climate Change Research By KTLA, 9/29/19

It did not escape Stewart Resnick’s attention that, after some unusual winter weather in 2015, his pistachio crop took a 70% hit. He couldn’t miss it when, for several years, his heat-blasted oranges came in smaller and less prodigiously than in the past. California’s persistent drought could not be ignored, either, by the man reputed to be the biggest farmer in America. Those events influenced the Resnicks’ decision, announced Thursday, to give $750 million to Caltech for research into climate change and sustainability. And there was another inspiration.

DAVID JOLES • Star Tribune A pipe by Billy Bryan for sale at Pipestone National Monument in 2012.

No pipe sales at Pipestone Pipestone National Monument in southwestern Minnesota said it will stop selling pipes, following decades of tribal complaints that the sales desecrate sacred grounds. Faith Spotted Eagle , who chairs the Ihanktonwan Treaty Steering Committee and is a member of the Yankton Sioux Tribe, called the pipestone from which the pipes are carved “the blood of our people,” according to Minnesota Public Radio. Lauren Blacik , superintendent of the Pipestone National Monument, said the monument’s leadership has come to understand that carrying a pipe is a deeply personal, cultural and spiritual responsibility. Indian craftspeople will continue to demonstrate pipestone carving and share their cultural history with visitors to the monument. The Pipestone Indian Shrine Association, which operates the park’s store, said it will open a location in downtown Pipestone where pipes carved from pipestone may be sold.

There Is No Economic Justification for Drilling in the Arctic Wildlife Refuge

DEAN BAKER, TRUTHOUT

Earlier this month, the U.S. Department of the Interior released its final environmental impact study on plans to drill for oil and gas in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, giving the go-ahead for drilling in this incredibly sensitive area. But this is not a story of tough trade-offs between the environment and the economy: It is a gratuitous act of environmental destruction.

Please join PLAN, Sierra Club, Great Basin Water Network, and Patagonia Thursday October 3rd at the Patagonia Outlet in Reno for the Protect our Water free film screening event.

This event is to further understand the issues the public should know about. It's public education. It's the truth. Our waters are fading from the lands, public lands are being leased to exploration and drilling. We can't stand by to watch extractive resource industries cause perpetual pollution; meaning, an eternity of time to clean up!

Please come to foster care to the land and to be a good caretaker of land, water and air. We are here together or we won't.
