Quarantine

We are outlaws now,
Hiding out,
Cannot be found,
Behind our masks.

Masks self imposed,
In the stillness,
Loss of normal,
Creates anger.

Things not right,
Soul examination,
Tough to handle,
Someone has to pay.

Find that enemy,
Raise some hell,
Payback might come,
Careful now.

Remember,
Elders counsel,
Patience, Love,
Balance!

We will lower our masks,
Eventually seeing each other,
There are no sides,
Only imperfect human beings.

HUD AWARDS NEARLY $120 MILLION TO TRIBES ACROSS THE NATION

111 projects will support economic and housing development for Native American Families

This week, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Secretary Ben Carson announced nearly \$120 million in Indian Community Development Block Grant (ICDBG) awards to Tribes across the Nation. The ICDBG program provides funding to use in developing American Indian and Alaska Native Communities, including decent housing, a suitable living environment, and economic opportunities, primarily for low- and moderate-income persons. "President Trump made it clear from the moment he became President, the forgotten men and women of our Nation will be forgotten no more," said Secretary Carson. "Today's announcement of nearly $120 million in funding to American Indian tribes will provide these communities with safe and affordable housing and advance economic development."

"HUD is committed to helping Native Americans thrive and the funding announced today will have a positive impact on building sustainable communities," said R. Hunter Kurtz, Assistant Secretary for Public and Indian Housing.

These funds, through the ICDBG program, will be used to support 107 projects on Tribal lands across the United States such as:

- A new drive-thru pharmacy,
- A new building for the local Boys & Girls Club of America,
- Repairs to a wastewater lagoon,
- The infrastructure necessary for a new housing development.

University Of Warcraft: Should I Spend My COVID-19 Time On MMOGs or MOOC

Online education websites like Coursera, edX and Udacity have struggled for years. But in the last two months, millions of adults have signed up to learn online during the coronavirus crisis. The new signup jolt could mean a renaissance for big internet learning networks known as MOOCs — massive open online courses. These high-profile university experiments sprang up almost a decade ago, with a proclaimed mission to “democratize education.”

Udacity and Coursera were founded at Stanford University by professors in the hot field of artificial intelligence. Their creations were portrayed as tech-fueled insurgents destined to disrupt the antiquated ways of traditional higher education. Early courses attracted hundreds of thousands of students from around the world. However screen fatigue eventually set in, attention would stray, and few people wound up completing their distance learning courses. The sites even became a punchline among academics: “Remember the MOOCs?”

But the online ventures adapted over time through trial and error, gathering lessons that could provide a road map for school districts and universities pushed online. EdX, created by MIT and Harvard University in 2012, is a non-profit. “Active learning works, and social learning works,” said edX's founder and CEO. "And you have to understand that teaching online and learning online are skills of their own." (NYT)

Opinion | The Future of College Is Online, and It's Cheaper (NYT, $) Hurray, not only is the rent too damn high but so is college tuition. The best thing Daily Pnut's Tim got out of going to West Point and Stanford was definitely NOT the education (grades don't even matter at Stanford's business and law schools and rightfully so because grades don't predict success whether on the fields of unfriendly strife in Iraq or Silicon Valley) but the relationships-friendships. "Elite" schools are "elite" because they are just a way for capitalists to cavort in the most anti-capitalist way and that is to fraternize and create informal unions. As Peter Thiel notes, the most strident capitalists are secretly anti-capitalist monopolists: "If you're the founder... entrepreneur starting a company, you always want to aim for monopoly and you always want to avoid competition."

Water Shorts

EPA Constrains State Permitting Authority

Seeking to corral what he called "abuses" of power by states, Andrew Wheeler, the head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, announced changes to the Clean Water Act permitting process. The changes will affect state and tribal regulation of pipeline, energy, and transportation projects.

States are allowed to weigh in on major infrastructure projects through Section 401 of the Clean Water Act. The section gives states and tribes the power to add conditions or veto projects if they will pollute waterways.

Wheeler said the abuses occur when states reject projects using Section 401 authority for reasons that do not involve water quality. He mentioned energy infrastructure projects in the Pacific Northwest and New York state as examples of abuse. A liquefied natural gas export terminal at Jordan Cove, in Oregon, was vetoed this way, as was the Constitution natural gas pipeline, in New York.

The new rule “prevents states from using the Clean Water Act in ways that hold our nation’s energy infrastructure hostage,” Wheeler said. Decisions must be restricted to water pollution, not expanded to wetlands damage or climate change considerations.

The new rule also set a one-year time limit on state reviews. If a state fails to complete its review within a year, the requirement is waived.

What is the effect of the rule? Lawyers with Beveridge and Diamond say that, as for many EPA decisions, this ruling could be challenged in court. They also speculate that the time limits could result in more vetoes if states and tribes cannot produce sufficient evidence in one year to certify the project.

Faster Environmental Review

President Trump signed an executive order to ease the burden of environmental review for federal projects, in order to boost economic growth during the coronavirus pandemic.

The head of federal agencies are to use “emergency procedures, statutory exemptions, categorical exclusions, analyses that have already been completed, and concise and focused analyses” to speed the completion of transportation, public works, and energy projects.

The order follows a directive that Trump issued in May to federal agencies to relax regulations that could “inhibit economic recovery,” as long as the actions were within the scope of the law.

Senate Passes Indian Water Rights Bill

The Senate approved legislation that deals with a number of Indian water rights claims.

The bill approves a water rights agreement between the Navajo Nation and the state of Utah. It extends the authorization for a federal fund dedicated to Indian water rights settlements.

The bill increases authorized federal funding for a regional water system in the Pojoaque basin of New Mexico by $137 million. It also orders a federal study of a multipurpose dam that would be used to satisfy water rights claims by the Kickapoo Tribe of Kansas
