Have you seen it? The NATHPO Board of Directors and staff are excited to announce our new logo!

This updated logo is the first of many exciting updates and enhancements that we are working on to better serve you. The new visual representation of NATHPO immediately resonated with us and we know this is the right direction for moving forward. We kept the most recognizable and meaningful imagery as it will always represent who we are. The updates include a bold, simplified design. The new blue color breathes new life into this design and distinguishes our logo from the rest of the pack.

Is there symbolism or meaning in the new logo that resonates with you? Tell us about it. We'd love to hear from you!

Stay tuned -- we are working hard on the new NATHPO website. It will be easier to find the resources you need, as well as offer a member portal for communication, dues, conference registration, training and more. It will integrate multiple functions and help us build and support the community of tribal preservation leaders and practitioners.

Also, please send us pictures that we can use on the pages of the new website to bring it to life! We want to feature images of the places and people that are important to you -- of course only those that are appropriate to share and with your permission. If you do, please accompany them with a credit and brief description. Our strength is our members, and we want to highlight you!

We plan to launch the full new site and platform in the coming weeks so you can use it to pay your 2020 member dues. We'll also hold the Board election we had scheduled for March, and find out from you how we can best serve you while we continue to be alone together!

Please join me in giving a huge 'thank you' to David Bernie (Ihanktonwan Dakota – Yankton Sioux) who used his gifts as a graphic artist to help us develop this bold, beautiful new logo, and is redesigning the website. We also thank Julie Nelson for lending us her many talents to help ignite our potential.

Please contact me at valerie@nathpo.org or 202-628-8476 for additional information. Thank you for all you do to protect culturally important places that perpetuate Native identity, resilience, and cultural endurance, and to empower tribal preservation leader.

Valerie J. Grussing, PhD, NATHPO Executive Director

Google announces new plan that will let people get great tech jobs without a college degree

Do you remember having to take a college course in something like Elizabethan poetry and wondering how this will ever be applicable in real life? Perhaps while taking algebra you were wondering how important finding X really was. Google may agree with you.

The tech juggernaut has just announced a series of courses designed to teach students the specific skills that today's forward-thinking companies are looking for. Each course takes about six months and offers "Google Career Certificates" upon completion. The cost is unclear but is expected to be around $50/month for each course. While Google could benefit from training potential employees in the ways of their infrastructure for a seamless transition into the company, they also have access to the top of the talent pool. Regardless of any advantage, Google is trying to gain by putting forth such a program, this streamlined approach. Read the Story

The Pandemic Is Not a Natural Disaster

by Kate Brown

Zoonotic diseases can seem like earthquakes; they appear to be random acts of nature. In fact, they are more like hurricanes—they can occur more frequently, and become more powerful, if human beings alter the environment in the wrong ways.

Wanda Georgis 🥺 feeling sad. This evening we lost our Aunt Orpha Hooper-George. I know my Mom and her sister Orpha are up in Heaven visiting and laughing and that comforted me. Love and will miss you Aunt, especially when I go to Fallon and make a stop to visit with you.

RIP Aunt Orpha 🥺🥺 Aunt Orpha was the oldest of the Hooper family. Picture of my Mom visiting with her “Bauzee” (older sister). Beautiful Hooper sisters.
