This project would not have been possible without the contributions of our citizen archivists and experts in Native American studies. Earlier this year, we launched a Citizen Archivist mission to tag photographs using those identified topical subject tags. Each of these subject tags is now used to pull photographs from the Catalog into the finding aid. We still need your help! Visit our Native American Photographs Tagging Mission page for more details and to get started.

"We're all water from different rivers, that's why it's so easy to meet; we're all water in this vast, vast ocean, someday we'll evaporate together." – Yoko Ono

Robin Clay

A rich father who wanted his son to know what it was like to be poor brought him to live with a farming family for a few days. The child stayed there for 3 days and 3 nights. Back in the car on their way to the town, his father asked him:

"And your experience?"

"Fine," replied the boy.

"Did you learn anything?"

The boy then explained:

1 We have a dog and they have four of them.

2 We have a pool with treated water. They have a river with crystal clear water, fish and other good things

3 We have electric lights in our garden, but they have the stars and the moon to light them up.

4 Our garden extends to the fence. Theirs up to the horizon.

5 We buy our food; they cultivate, harvest and cook it.

6 We listen to CDs ... they hear a sustained symphony of birds, crickets and other animals ...
... all this, sometimes accompanied by the singing of a neighbour who works on the farm.
7 We use the microwave. What they cook tastes much better cooked on a slow fire.
8 We are surrounded by alarm fences to protect ourselves ... They live with open doors, protected by the friendship of their neighbours.
9 We are connected to the telephone, computer and television. They are in communion with life, sky, sun, water, fields, animals, friends and families. "
The father was impressed with his son's feelings. Then finally the son comes to the conclusion:
"Thanks for showing me how poor we are!
Every day we get poorer because we no longer look at nature !!! "
