Exhibit Opens at Stewart Indian School Cultural Center

Show Showcases the Regalia Connected with Modern Pow Wow Celebrations

Carson City – The exhibition, Dancing for the Earth, Dancing for the People: Pow Wow Regalia and Art of the Great Basin at the Great Basin Native Artists Gallery inside the Stewart Indian School Cultural Center & Museum will display contemporary pow wow dance regalia, photography, mixed media sculpture, Great Basin beadwork, digital graphic design and more. This exhibition was curated by Melissa Melero-Moose (Fallon Paiute/Modoc), founder of Great Basin Native Artists Collective. It opens on Wednesday October 12.

Curator Melero-Moose describes the aim of the exhibition which "seeks to display a small view into the pow wow culture and how contemporary and historical regalia were never 'costumes' to the Indigenous peoples of this continent."

"The contemporary pow wow is a social gathering, a competitive dance contest, an art exhibition, a cultural exchange, and so much more. Evolving over the years from traditional tribal ceremony, which continues, and grows stronger, the pow wow brings the people together many times each year in healing, dance, drumming and song," she adds.

Some of the participating artists will include Phil Buckheart, Bucky Harjo, Linda Eben Jones, Jack Malotte, Lyndah Steele, Theo Steele, Janice Eben Stump, Chad Yellow John, and Bhie-Cie Zahn-Nahtzu.

The exhibition will run from October 12, 2022 – May 26, 2023, inside the GBNA Gallery, inside the Stewart Indian School Cultural Center & Museum, 1 Jacobsen Way, Carson City, Nevada. The Great Basin Native Artists Gallery's mission is to gain a better knowledge and awareness of the art and peoples of the Great Basin and to create opportunities for this underrepresented region in all forms of the arts.

Painting tree trunks with a white lime solution is an indigenous organic pest control technique from Mexico.

The ancient Maya would paint limewash, which is a solution of burnt lime and water on tree trunks to protect the tree from insects that climb trunks to do damage to the tree or eat the fruit.

Last Wednesday, our Indigenous Education Now! (IEN) Coalition met with Superintendent Carvalho to center and prioritize 120+ Native and Indigenous tribal members, elders, students, and parents at Anahuacalmecac School in El Sereno.

Readers Comment on Mayan article:

Mayan history is amazing. Island of Atl (Atlantic, Atlantis) 9000+ yrs old. When asked then Plato said Atlantis sunk 9000 years ago. Archaic civilizations are completely lost to us.

The incredible astronomical/mathematical ability of these 'primitive' peoples speaks for itself. Not to mention the completely unexplainable architecture of the area. Our 'advanced' civilization is unable technologically to reproduce that architecture that we cannot comprehend. Ditto pyramids.

Also interesting is reference to the Pleiades, which have been referred to repeatedly in terms of ETs.

Yes, I am one of those who believe we are not alone. It's fatuous to think human beings are the top of the line. Especially considering our technological advancement in the last hundred years, from horse and buggy to walking on the moon. Only another hundred years could bring unimaginable advancement. ET Intellect is thousands, billions of years beyond us... The People, probable descendants of the Mayans, and also the Clovis people who were wiped out in the Younger Dryas event 13,000 years ago, have had truthful prophecies we are witnessing today.

God only knows what information was in the Alexandrian libraries, and other artifacts that were arrogantly destroyed. What ancient civilizations were blown away by other asteroid, meteor disasters? Volcanoes? Plate tectonics? Asteroid/meteor/volcano winters? Ice ages? Earth is a lovely, very unsafe place.

We are constantly targeted by the Taurid meteors, the asteroid belt. There's always an asteroid with our name on it. The cost of being an attractive, young, lovely planet in a solar system of the same character is tectonics—derived volcanoes, earthquakes.

Hi! I saw in journal 5301 that you linked to a documentary called "The Mystery of the Maya." I didn't pay for the full documentary, but the description and trailer raise some red flags for the documentary supporting a hyperdiffusionist theory about Atlanteans being responsible for the creation of the Maya civilization (I can expand on why I think this). Here are a couple of articles about how harmful these theories can be: article. I googled the creator, Freddy Silva, and found a summary of one of his books where he says that "indigenous people the world over...will state that, 12,000 years ago — during a period called the Younger Dryas — another culture lived alongside them. Described as unusually tall, fair-skinned, red-haired or blonde, these 'gods' knew how to bend the forces of nature, enabling them to built extraordinary megalithic temples and develop a comparatively advanced civilization." This really sounds like the creator of the documentary supports the idea popular among white supremacist hyperdiffusionists that Indigenous people could not build their civilizations without the help of advanced "fair-skinned" people. I can send more articles/information about hyperdiffusionist theories or the history of connecting the Maya with Atlantis if that would be helpful. Overall though, I've learned so much from the journal. Thank you so much for putting it together. EW

Ed note: thanks for the comments. I believe that the communities need to see(hear) what people are saying and then either refute or substantiate it. sdc

California water agencies offer Colorado River savings

California water agencies that rely on the Colorado River said Wednesday they can reduce their use by one-tenth starting in 2023

Meet the California Farmers Awash in Colorado River Water, Even in a DroughtA few hundred farms in the southern tip of California, along the Mexican border, may hold the key to saving the drought-plagued Colorado

River from collapse.

These farmers, in Imperial County, currently draw more water from the Colorado River than all of Arizona and Nevada combined. They inherited the legal right to use that water, but they're now under pressure to give up some of it.

This area gets less attention than California's Central Valley, the nation's leading producer of produce and nuts, which draws its water from rain and snow in the Sierra Nevada, or pumps it from shrinking underground aquifers.

The Imperial Valley, by contrast, has only one source of water: the Colorado River, 80 miles to the east. Last Sunday, Brazil went to the polls in a historic election that saw the victory of members of Brazil's Indigenous "headdress" caucus in São Paulo and the state of Minas Gerais. The victories of Sonia Guajajara and Célia Xakriabá – central leaders of Brazil's Indigenous movement – bring much-needed political representation to Indigenous peoples whose rights and lands have been ruthlessly targeted by the Bolsonaro regime

A deeply polarized country chose between the diametrically opposed visions of Jair Bolsonaro and Lula da Silva, in a race that was close despite projections that favored Lula. The world is watching closely in a decision that represent the future of the Amazon rainforest and global climate stability.

A runoff between Bolsonaro and Lula is set for the end of October. This election comes at a critical moment as the Amazon rainforest reaches a tipping point, and the voice of powerful and credible leaders is needed to reverse the destructive tide unleashed by Bolsonaro.

WALKER RIVER PAIUTE TRIBE

Wayne Purcell · ·

Looking for a good book to read this fall? I'm the author of a historical novel/murder mystery based on true events that happened, starting in Schurz in 1891, 131 years ago. It's called Justice for All: The Search for Big Poker Tom.

Big Poker Tom, from the Walker River Reservation, leaves to find a high-stakes poker game in Bridgeport. Only his horse returns.

A Paiute search party investigates. Their discoveries escalate into an intense, explosive situation that pits Paiutes, Whites, Chinese, and their justice systems against one another. Sheriff Michael J. Cody is caught in the middle. Cody tries to uphold his sworn duty to keep the peace; however... While the story may seem unbelievable, it is based on true events from the pages of history. It's a story that took me nearly fifteen years to research and write. It just came out in March of this year.

It's been sold at the museums in Hawthorne and Yerington and at several places in Bridgeport as well as on Amazon, where it has a five-star rating. I think you would enjoy reading it, as it's about your ancestors and places you are very familiar with, and it's a round that the Paiutes win! If you have any ideas on how I might publicize it, please let me know! i hope you can get a copy of the book and enjoy reading it!
