The presence of the Washoe Tribe, the first inhabitants of the Lake Tahoe Basin, was also felt at the Summit Wednesday, with Washoe Tribe member Herman Fillmore delivering a prayer in his native tongue.

Shoshonean History and Culture

Nanogwa (NanoKwaa')

NanoKwaa' was the Shoshone term used when families in the Late Summer and Early Fall would branch off and form dozens of smaller familial groups. Some larger families would head to the Plains to hunt Buffalo, while the NanoKwaa' would travel Southern Idaho/Wyoming and Northern Utah to hunt Deer, Elk, Antelope, small game and forage for berries and roots to prepare for winter. Once they gathered the amount of food that they could everything was brought back to the main camp to smoke and store. Dried meat was always kept inside the lodge/teepee/wickiup and roots were stored in nearby caches.

This was also a dangerous time because other tribes were also preparing for winter. This led to many families disappearing due to death, enslavement and other ill happenings.

Guess Where They'll Get Uranium Now?

Or so They Figure!

Note: Excuse the cross posting and help get the message out.

This comes as no surprise to thinking people. This must be stopped.

The coup in Niger, the takeover by Russia and the resultant warfare means the West, ie USA and France, cannot get Nigerien uranium and a few other things. This brings the focus back onto Canada where some of the best and mostest uranium is to be found.

The price of uranium is now soaring.

Does anyone remember 2007 phoney police-led anti uranium mining protests near Sharbot Lake Ontario??? It was a 100 day performance that never got the Oscar it deserved though some of the players were well paid.

Clayton Morris, formerly of Fox News who now does his own broadcast, is advising us to invest in a Canadian mining company, Traction Uranium which is developing yet another uranium mine at Key Lake, northern Saskatchewan. The stock for this junior minor is available for pennies.

I've been listening to Clayton and his wife Natalie for awhile now. They bring out some very interesting and relevant information. Their reports are factual as far as I can tell but like some in the alt media they are very pushy with merchandise including stocks and investments, looks pretty capitalistic status quo with a twist.

Putin stated recently at a meeting with some African leaders in St. Petersburg, that Russia wants to help Africa with their nuclear development and space program. He's sending free grain to his favourites. There's a very dirty war going on with no end in sight.

I wrote this message to Clayton this morning after viewing the linked video:

The US does not own Canada.
the Indigenous people of northern Saskatchewan, the Denesuline and Nehiyawuk , do NOT want more mining of uranium on their lands.
did you consider that part of the discussion????
the environmental destruction, forever poisoning of the land and water.
i disagree with you AND russia, nuclear is NOT the way to go for energy.
has everyone completely lost their minds??
the power grab in Africa will not really help African people either.

btw, back in 2007, near ottawa canada, there was a phoney police-led anti uranium mining protest presumably to stop uranium mining in ontario.
this happened after the Cigar Lake mine cave in which sent the price of UR soaring and a frenzy going.
when the uranium dust settles, there will be even more dead bodies.
URANIUM IS NOT THE WAY TO GO.

you cannot save a rotten house!!!!!!!

The unipolar world order is crumbling faster than ever before just look at Africa which just shocked the world this weekend with country after country standing up to Western imperialism. Russia President Putin has made military deals and trade deals all across Africa and protestors are raising Russian flags across the continent. No wonder the west is on high alert sending weapons and troops to the border of Niger. Africa is on the brink of a revolution.

Thanks to Traction Uranium for sponsoring today's video. You can read more about their drilling projects in Canada right here: <https://tractionuranium.com> Their ticker symbol is: TRCTF

Nevada BLM Determined to Spend Federal Funds Wisely

August 9, 2023 - Alex Gonzalez, Public News Service (NV)

The Humboldt O'Neil Basin and the Montana Mountains are the two restoration landscapes in Nevada the Bureau of Land Management will focus on for ecosystem restoration. (Adobe Stock)

As the one-year anniversary of the Inflation Reduction Act approaches, some Nevada experts are examining what it has meant for the state so far.

A recent online discussion focused on where Inflation Reduction Act investments have been made for Nevada's public lands, and what can be done to ensure future renewable energy projects are executed responsibly.

Greg Helseth, renewable energy branch chief for the Bureau of Land Management's Nevada office, Greg Helseth said his agency's role is to manage the land for multiple uses, and renewable energy is no exception.

He pointed out the agency tries to site projects with the lowest possible impact, but it is not always 100% achievable.

"If the mitigation works out correctly, then you can possibly approve a project, but there are a lot of lessons learned over time," Helseth acknowledged. "We're seeing a change from disc-and-roll to leaving vegetation intact for the biodiversity."

Helseth noted some "early funding opportunities" have become available through the agency's updated Solar Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement, which, according to the BLM, "helps accelerate and continue momentum for the clean energy economy." Helseth predicts most of the Inflation Reduction Act investments will be seen starting next year, for what he calls "conservation metrics."

The agency's proposed Public Lands Rule would uphold the BLM's "multiple use and sustained yield mission." Helseth said it is playing a part in how funding is allocated. The rule would put conservation efforts on par with other uses.

Helseth said in Nevada, the agency is already mindful of the need to better coexist with the landscape and wildlife when energy projects are being pursued.

"We are trying to keep away from the corridors and only -- we do things like construction only during certain periods of the year -- so that we're not affecting big horn sheep lambing season, or we're not affecting sage grouse lek season," Helseth outlined.

Andrew Jackson's Third State of the Union Address 6 December 1831

Again, I urge you to read the whole document. This one has major emphasis on foreign relations and public finance.

https://en.wikisource.org/wiki/Andrew\_Jackson%27s\_Third\_State\_of\_the\_Union\_Address

With many other Indian tribes, improvements in agriculture and household manufacture are advancing, and with all our peace and friendship are established on grounds much firmer than heretofore. The measure adopted of establishing trading houses among them, and of furnishing them necessaries in exchange for their commodities, at such moderated prices as leave no gain, but cover us from loss, has the most conciliatory and useful effect upon them, and is that which will best secure their peace and good will.

The internal peace and security of our confederated States is the next principal object of the General Government. Time and experience have proved that the abode of the native Indian within their limits is dangerous to their peace and injurious to himself. In accordance with my recommendation at a former session of Congress, an appropriation of $500K was made to aid the voluntary removal of the various tribes beyond the limits of the States. At the last session I had the happiness to announce that the Chickasaws and Choctaws had accepted the generous offer of the Government and agreed to remove beyond the Mississippi River, by which the whole of the State of Mississippi and the western part of Alabama will be freed from Indian occupancy and opened to a civilized population. The treaties with these tribes are in a course of execution, and their removal, it is hoped, will be completed in the course of 1832.

At the request of the authorities of Georgia the registration of Cherokee Indians for emigration has been resumed, and it is confidently expected that half, if not two-third, of that tribe will follow the wise example of their more westerly brethren. Those who prefer remaining at their present homes will hereafter be governed by the laws of Georgia, as all her citizens are, and cease to be the objects of peculiar care on the part of the General Government.

During the present year the attention of the Government has been particularly directed to those tribes in the powerful and growing State of Ohio, where considerable tracts of the finest lands were still occupied by the aboriginal proprietors. Treaties, either absolute or conditional, have been made extinguishing the whole Indian title to the reservations in that State, and the time is not distant, it is hoped, when Ohio will be no longer embarrassed with the Indian population. The same measures will be extended to Indiana as soon as there is reason to anticipate success. It is confidently believed that perseverance for a few years in the present policy of the Government will extinguish the Indian title to all lands lying within the States composing our Federal Union, and remove beyond their limits every Indian who is not willing to submit to their laws.

Thus will all conflicting claims to jurisdiction between the States and the Indian tribes be put to rest. It is pleasing to reflect that results so beneficial, not only to the States immediately concerned, but to the harmony of the Union, will have been accomplished by measures equally advantageous to the Indians. What the native savages become when surrounded by a dense population and by mixing with the whites may be seen in the miserable remnants of a few Eastern tribes, deprived of political and civil rights, forbidden to make contracts, and subjected to guardians, dragging out a wretched existence, without excitement, without hope, and almost without thought.

But the removal of the Indians beyond the limits and jurisdiction of the States does not place them beyond the reach of philanthropic aid and Christian instruction. On the contrary, those whom philanthropy or religion may induce to live among them in their new abode will be more free in the exercise of their benevolent functions than if they had remained within the limits of the States, embarrassed by their internal regulations. Now subject to no control but the superintending agency of the General Government, exercised with the sole view of preserving peace, they may proceed unmolested in the interesting experiment of gradually advancing a community of American Indians from barbarism to the habits and enjoyments of civilized life.

Among the happiest effects of the improved relations of our Republic has been an increase of trade, producing a corresponding increase of revenue beyond the most sanguine anticipations of the Treasury Department.

Fourth State of Union 4 December 1831

(Foreign affairs, manufacturing, fiscal problems)

For a detailed and highly satisfactory view of the operations of the War Department I refer you to the accompanying report of the Secretary of War.

The hostile incursions of the Sac and Fox Indians necessarily led to the interposition of the Government. A portion of the troops, under Generals Scott and Atkinson, and of the militia of the State of Illinois were called into the field. After a harassing warfare, prolonged by the nature of the country and by the difficulty of procuring subsistence, the Indians were entirely defeated, and the disaffected band dispersed or destroyed. The result has been creditable to the troops engaged in the service. Severe as is the lesson to the Indians, it was rendered necessary by their unprovoked aggressions, and it is to be hoped that its impression will be permanent and salutary.

This campaign has evinced the efficient organization of the Army and its capacity for prompt and active service. Its several departments have performed their functions with energy and dispatch, and the general movement was satisfactory.

Our fellow citizens upon the frontiers were ready, as they always are, in the tender of their services in the hour of danger. But a more efficient organization of our militia system is essential to that security which is one of the principal objects of all governments. Neither our situation nor our institutions require or permit the maintenance of a large regular force. History offers too many lessons of the fatal result of such a measure not to warn us against its adoption here. The expense which attends it, the obvious tendency to employ it because it exists and thus to engage in unnecessary wars, and its ultimate danger to public liberty will lead us, I trust, to place our principal dependence for protection upon the great body of the citizens of the Republic. If in asserting rights or in repelling wrongs war should come upon us, our regular force should be increased to an extent proportional to the emergency, and our present small Army is a nucleus around which such force could be formed and embodied. But for the purposes of defense under ordinary circumstances we must rely upon the electors of the country. Those by whom and for whom the Government was instituted and is supported will constitute its protection in the hour of danger as they do its check in the hour of safety.

But it is obvious that the militia system is imperfect. Much time is lost, much unnecessary expense incurred, and much public property wasted under the present arrangement. Little useful knowledge is gained by the musters and drills as now established, and the whole subject evidently requires a thorough examination. Whether a plan of classification remedying these defects and providing for a system of instruction might not be adopted is submitted to the consideration of Congress. The Constitution has vested in the General Government an independent authority upon the subject of the militia which renders its action essential to the establishment or improvement of the system, and I recommend the matter to your consideration in the conviction that the state of this important arm of the public defense requires your attention.

I am happy to inform you that the wise and humane policy of transferring from the eastern to the western side of the Mississippi the remnants of our aboriginal tribes, with their own consent and upon just terms, has been steadily pursued, and is approaching, I trust, its consummation. By reference to the report of the Secretary of War and to the documents submitted with it you will see the progress which has been made since your last session in the arrangement of the various matters connected with our Indian relations. With one exception every subject involving any question of conflicting jurisdiction or of peculiar difficulty has been happily disposed of, and the conviction evidently gains ground among the Indians that their removal to the country assigned by the United States for their permanent residence furnishes the only hope of their ultimate prosperity.

With that portion of the Cherokees, however, living within the State of Georgia it has been found impracticable as yet to make a satisfactory adjustment. Such was my anxiety to remove all the grounds of complaint and to bring to a termination the difficulties in which they are involved that I directed the very liberal propositions to be made to them which accompany the documents herewith submitted. They can not but have seen in these offers the evidence of the strongest disposition on the part of the Government to deal justly and liberally with them. An ample indemnity was offered for their present possessions, a liberal provision for their future support and improvement, and full security for their private and political rights. What ever difference of opinion may have prevailed respecting the just claims of these people, there will probably be none respecting the liberality of the propositions, and very little respecting the expediency of their immediate acceptance. They were, however, rejected, and thus the position of these Indians remains unchanged, as do the views communicated in my message to the Senate of [1831-02-22].
