The Seven Sacred Teachings, also known as the Seven Grandfather Teachings, are a set of teachings that have been passed down from generation to generation by First Nations people of North America. These teachings are the guiding principles for living a meaningful and fulfilling life, and they are essential to maintaining a harmonious relationship between human beings, nature, and the divine.

The Seven Sacred Teachings include:

1. Wisdom involves making wise choices that lead us on a path of positive growth and development. To attain wisdom, one must learn from experiences, seek knowledge from elders, and listen and learn from one's mistakes.
2. Love emphasizes the importance of unconditional love, compassion, and kindness towards ourselves and others. It teaches us to give love freely and unconditionally, without any expectation of receiving love in return.
3. Respect emphasizes the importance of treating oneself, others, and nature with respect. Respect involves acknowledging the value and worth of all living things, and treating each other with kindness, honor, and dignity.
4. Bravery involves courage, fortitude and strength of character. Bravery inspires us to face our fears and overcome obstacles, to push ourselves to our limits and to fight for what is right.
5. Honesty emphasizes the importance of being truthful, trustworthy, and sincere in all our interactions with others. Honesty promotes trust, loyalty, and integrity, and it allows us to build meaningful and enduring relationships.
6. Humility involves having a modest and unpretentious attitude towards life, recognizing that we are all equal and interconnected. Humility inspires us to serve others, to be compassionate towards those who are less fortunate, and to strive to make a positive impact in the world.
7. Truth involves understanding and acknowledging the reality of our existence and our place in the world. It encourages us to seek knowledge, to be open-minded, and to question our assumptions and beliefs.

Each of these teachings are an inseparable whole and work together to create a holistic approach to mental, physical, emotional, and spiritual life, that is centered around humility, respect, and love.

In a photo taken in 1949 near Coppermine, Canada, an Inuit girl proudly displayed her Canadian Inuit dog, also known as qimmiq. The dog was nestled in the girl's hood, which is traditionally used to carry babies and is called an artiggi. The hood is meticulously crafted with caribou sinew. Inuit women wear a unique parka called an amauti, which has a pouch at the back below the hood to carry a baby. The girl in the picture was carrying a puppy in a similar position, which is adorable as she was imitating the mothers she had observed carrying their babies in this manner. I wish that the puppy had a long, joyful, and healthy life with her.

Grantee Spotlight: National Indian Youth Council

In April 2022, the National Indian Youth Council (NIYC) entered a community partnership with Gordon Bernell Charter School, a community school that believes in the transformative power of individualized education for students of all ages in and outside of incarceration. Through both the high school diploma pathway and an adult education program, Gordon Bernell empowers all students to build a future on a foundation of academic competency and professional readiness. The mission has always been "transforming lives from the inside out." Since signing the MOU, NIYC has successfully graduated 12 participants from Gordon Bernell with an additional four participants currently enrolled in the program. The partnership represents NIYC's commitment to those who are involved with the justice system, because all Native Americans deserve a chance to be successful in life. NIYC looks forward to a long-term partnership with the dynamic educational program at Gordon Bernell Charter School.

Thank you to Deanna Aquiar, NIYC's Director of Programs Development for sharing their story. We hope you will share your program highlights also! Please send your story to DOL-DINAP@tribaltechllc.com.

Indigenizing Health Career Pathways Across Generations

The White House Initiative on Advancing Educational Equity, Excellence, and Economic Opportunity for Native Americans and Strengthening Tribal Colleges and Universities (WHI TCU), along with the U.S. Department of Education and the U.S. Department of Labor, is hosting a four-part, virtual dialogue series that addresses multiple topics that impact employment for American Indians and Alaska Natives.

The fourth and final dialogue will focus on AI/AN health career pathways in education. The dialogue will offer perspectives from experts from the AI/AN community who have participated in, advocated for, and benefited from a process of indigenizing curricula, education program design, and delivery for AI/AN individuals with and without disabilities. The speakers and featured practices span generations: from early health pathways engagement in a program geared toward high school youth, to a college nursing program designed to include college students who live in remote areas, to a nurse, professor, and tribal elder who has been advocating for and providing nursing education that engages students' aspirations and culture.

Western states won't lose as much Colorado River water in 2024, but long-term challenges remain

NBC News, 8/16/2023 - Federal officials said Tuesday they will ease water cuts for Western states reliant on the Colorado River in 2024, thanks to a slightly improved outlook, but long-term challenges remain. The river serves seven U.S. states, Native American tribes and two states in Mexico. It also supports a multibillion-dollar farm industry in the West and generates hydropower used across the region. Years of overuse by farms and cities, and the effects of drought worsened by climate change has meant much less water flows today through the Colorado River than in previous decades.

Trails of Hope: Overland Diaries and Letters, 1846–1869

Trails of Hope: Overland Diaries and Letters, 1846–1869 is a collection of the original writings of 49 voyagers on the Mormon, California, Oregon, and Montana trails who wrote while traveling on the trail. Some diarists speak with uncommon eloquence and others with maddening brevity, while telling their stories of persistence and pain, birth and death, God and gold, dust and debris, bugs and buffalo, love and laughter, and trail tedium.

Accompanying the original diary images and their searchable transcripts are 43 contemporary maps; seven trail guides; 82 photographs, watercolors and art sketches; four essays on the Mormon and California trails, maps and trail guides; suggested readings for further discovery; and brief biographies of 45 of the 49 diarists.

[WHY ARE AFRICAN HUTS !\[\]\(e3275251d0893157c3584e20c81dc3ba_img.jpg\) ROUND?](#)

African architectural philosophy had evolved on the basis of temporary human existence and life in harmony with nature rather than against it. In that regard, Africans deviated from building homes that stand in the way of natural elements like air/wind, water and earth itself. As the air blows against the hut, it circumvents the cylindrical structure and continues flowing. If the water comes, it finds its way around. And if the earth expands and/or contracts, the rounder structure remains intact. If you ponder on natural concepts, for instance, why tree-trunks cylindrical, then you will grasp the wisdom in this architecture.
