Fish and Wildlife Service Funding Announcement: Youth Engagement, Education, and Employment The Fish and Wildlife Service has identified $28,000,000 to invest in a projected 375 awards under the Public Land Corps Act Programs.

Applications are due from eligible organizations by September 1, 2024. The NOFA can be found here.

The purpose of the Fish and Wildlife Service Public Land Corps Act Programs is to provide work and education opportunities for youth (defined as ages 16–30 and up to age 35 for veterans) participants in the areas of natural and cultural resource conservation, development, and scientific research. Participants perform work on our nation's public lands by providing additional, unique capacity designed to boost the impact of the FWS for the conservation and management of fish, wildlife, plants and their habitats for the American people.

Eligible applicants include Native American tribal organizations and federally-recognized Native American tribal governments.

DOL Announces Funding to Support Services for Young People

On November 15, The U.S. Department of Labor today announced the availability of $98 million in funding to support the delivery of pre-apprenticeships in high-demand industries including construction, healthcare, information technology and hospitality.

Funded through the department's YouthBuild Program, the grants will help provide educational guidance, occupational skills training and employment services to disadvantaged young people, ages 16 to 24, in communities where barriers to academic and career skills development persist. For more information, click here.

New Forest Corps National Service Opportunity for Native Youth

AmeriCorps and U.S. Forest Service launched Forest Corps – a five-year $15 million agreement, and the first major interagency partnership under President Biden's American Climate Corps. Beginning Summer 2024, this program will engage 80 young adults, ages 18–26, in wildland fire prevention, reforestation, and other natural and cultural resource management projects to support the U.S. Forest Service's Wildfire Crisis Strategy and Reforestation Strategy. Native youth will be recruited for Forest Corps in key locations to support cultural resource management projects. AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps/Forest Corps members will receive a compensation package equivalent to $15 an hour, including lodging, transportation, clothing, a living allowance, health benefit, and more. Members will receive extensive training, hands-on-experience, and leadership skills for future careers in natural resource management, forest health, and climate resilience at the U.S Forest Service or other organizations.

AmeriCorps State and National Native Nation Grants

AmeriCorps improves lives, strengthens communities, and fosters civic engagement through service and volunteering. AmeriCorps brings people together to tackle some of the country's most pressing challenges through national service and volunteerism. AmeriCorps members and AmeriCorps Seniors volunteers serve with organizations dedicated to the improvement of communities and those serving. AmeriCorps helps make service a cornerstone of our national culture.

AmeriCorps grants are awarded to eligible organizations (Use Section C.1. Eligible Applicants) proposing to engage AmeriCorps members in evidence-based or evidence-informed interventions/practices to strengthen communities. An AmeriCorps member is an individual who engages in community service through an approved national service position. Members may receive a living allowance and other benefits while serving. Upon successful completion of their service, members earn a Segal AmeriCorps Education Award that they can use to pay for higher education expenses or apply to qualified student loans. For more information, click here.

It would have been anthropology legend Elsie Clews Parsons's 148th birthday today. Her studies of Pueblo culture definitively contradicted the evolutionary school of cultures that had reigned in the 19th century by demonstrating that all cultures are the result of a process of acculturation, of borrowing and adapting practices from the cultures one is in contact with, and that therefore the search for an ideal "pure" culture, such as that advocated by the Americanization movement of her era, was objectively naive. For decades, wherever there was a backwards idea about race or culture, she was there, armed with reams of data, to combat it, regardless of the damage it might do to her reputation to do so. Cultures in Contact: Anthropologist Elsie Clews Parsons and the Mechanics of Acculturation. Culture is not a thing. It is a negotiation, an ongoing tumult of borrowings and innovations hung upon a skeleton of previously accumulated borrowings and innovations, ever claiming proud uniqueness even in the midst of the most profound civilizational mimicry. Nevada received more than $1 billion in opioid settlements. There's little information about how it's being spent.: Nevada's AG office has been opaque about the expenditure of over $1 billion received from opioid settlements. Despite requests for detailed accounting, only a vague spreadsheet was provided, with no clear indication of funds benefiting Nevadans. This lack of transparency has caused concern among those affected by the opioid crisis in Nevada. (thisisreno.com)

"I am an old woman now. The buffaloes and black-tail deer are gone, and our Indian ways are almost gone. Sometimes I find it hard to believe that I ever lived them.

My little son grew up in the white man's school. He can read books, and he owns cattle and has a farm. He is a leader among our Hidatsa people, helping teach them to follow the white man's road.

He is kind to me. We no longer live in an earth lodge, but in a house with chimneys, and my son's wife cooks by a stove.

But for me, I cannot forget our old ways.

Often in summer I rise at daybreak and steal out to the corn fields, and as I hoe the corn I sing to it, as we did when I was young. No one cares for our corn songs now.

Sometimes in the evening I sit, looking out on the big Missouri. The sun sets, and dusk steals over the water. In the shadows I see again to see our Indian village, with smoke curling upward from the earth lodges, and in the river's roar I hear the yells of the warriors, and the laughter of little children of old.

It is but an old woman's dream. Then I see but shadows and hear only the roar of the river, and tears come into my eyes. Our Indian life, I know, is gone forever."

Howard Goldbaum is an emeritus professor of journalism at the University of Nevada at Reno. He has just completed a project, developing a virtual reality tour of Donner Summit. You can access the tour and (virtually play around on Donner Summit: https://allaroundnevada.com/donner-summit/

Dr. Goldbaum became interested in the documentation of the Donner Summit tunnels and snowshed after he and Wendell Huffman (Nevada State Railroad Museum) explored the area as part of the research for their book featuring the 3D CPRR photographs of Alfred A. Hart (https://waitingforthecars.com/). We recommend this book highly; you can find a review of it on the book review page of our DSHS website or the March, '13 issue of the Heirloom. Back then (2010), you could drive through the Summit Tunnel. Goldbaum and Huffman used a million-candlepower light to illuminate the vertical shaft area of the tunnel interior. Wendell's captions from the book are used extensively in the info panels of the virtual reality (VR) project and in the

On Savage Shores: How Indigenous Americans Discovered Europe by Caroline Dodds Pennock

Books about the Age of Exploration tend to focus on the Europeans who journeyed to the Americas in the 15th and 16th centuries. Historian Caroline Dodds Pennock opted for a different approach, reversing focus to discuss the tens of thousands of Indigenous Americans who traveled to Europe between 1492, when Christopher Columbus supposedly "discovered" the New World, and 1607, when the colony of Jamestown was founded.

"These overlooked multitudes of Indigenous travelers—nobles, diplomats, servants, translators, families, entertainers, enslaved people—overturn our understandings of early modern exploration and empire," writes Pennock in On Savage Shores. "And the vast network of global connections they inhabited ... sowed the seeds of our cosmopolitan modern world more than a century before" the Mayflower landed in Massachusetts in 1620.

Pennock's book draws on archival records to tell the stories of a diverse group of Indigenous people, including Martín Cortés, the mixed-race son of conquistador Hernán Cortés, who "lived the life of a young Spanish nobleman, essentially," as Pennock told Smithsonian earlier this year; Guaibimpará (Catherine du Brasil), a Brazilian woman who settled in France with her husband, a shipwrecked Portuguese sailor, in 1528; and Diego de Torres y Moyachoque, a cacique, or tribal chief, who traveled to Spain on a diplomatic mission in 1575.

Many of Pennock's subjects are anonymous, their names unrecorded in European sources that offer limited glimpses of their lives. But the historian deftly navigates these gaps in the archives, interrogating the colonialist bias of the records available to present a fuller portrait of cultural exchange at a pivotal moment in world history. As historian David Olusoga puts it in a review for the Guardian, On Savage Shores is a "work of historical recovery."

On Savage Shores: How Indigenous Americans Discovered Europe

A landmark work of narrative history that shatters our previous Eurocentric understanding of the Age of Discovery by telling the story of the Indigenous Americans who journeyed across the Atlantic to Europe after 1492.

On December 5 in 1875, the Nevada State Journal carried an account of Maj. Gen John Pope's report to the war department on the number of Native Americans living in US territory (not counting Alaska) claiming 100,000 "civilized" Indians, 180,000 "semi-civilized" Indians and 81,000 "barbarous" Indians.
